Local Matters.

MRS. SPOONER'S WILL.

The Old Ladies Home of Newport Residuary Legatee.

The will of Mrs. Abbie White, widow of Charles Spooner, bearing date Feb. 26, 1894, is now before the Court of Probate and contains one clause of general interest to Newport. After numerous bequests of a private character, aggregating about $8000, it closes as follows: "and all the rest, residue and remainder of my estate, of which I shall die seized and possessed, including any legacies which may have lapsed from any cause whatever, I give and bequeath to the Old Old Ladies Home of Newport, when such an institution is established, my understanding now being that efforts are being made to establish such an institution." Mr. Lewis L. Simmons is named as the executor and without bond.

Robberies.

The branch boot and shoe store of Mr. Geo. H. Popple, at 70 Broadway was relieved during Thursday night of a couple of pairs of men's shoes, sizes 6½ and 7. Mr. Hildreth, who has charge of the store, found upon his arrival yesterday morning that some one had thrown a good sized rock through the front show window and then extracted through the whole thus made two pairs of shoes as above. There were other shoes of different sizes within easy reach, that were left undisturbed. The police have the matter in hand, but as yet have made no arrests.

On the same night the residence of Mr. Wm. A. Peckham on Newport avenue was entered and the lower floor of the house pretty thoroughly ransacked though nothing of much value was stolen. Nor was this all, for Mr. Geo. Lawton's harness maker's shop on Marlborough street was relieved of a grip and cigars, tobacco and pipes were taken from a cigar store on Bath Road.

Driver Tew Exonerated.

Driver Tew of Hose Reel No. 2, who was accused by police officers of using improper language to them at the Shanahan fire, and who was arrested and fined for the same, has been completely exonerated by the board of firewards, who have held several meetings to investigate the facts in the case. At the final meeting held Wednesday evening, the official report of the finding of the board of firewards was as follows:

> FIRE DEPARTMENT HEADQUARTERS,
> West Marlborough Street,
> Newport, R. I., May 16, 1894.
> At a meeting of the Board of Firewards held this evening, to review the testimony given at the investigation in regard to the complaint of Officers W. J. Dunbar and I. J. Barker of the Police Department against Driver Thomas J. Tew of Hose Reel No. 2, the board after a careful consideration of the evidence there presented are of the opinion that Driver Thomas J. Tew should be exonerated from all blame in the matter.

Dr. and Mrs. S. C. Powell have arrived for the season.

The Flower Mission.

The Newport Flower Mission held its fifteenth annual meeting at Odd Fellows Hall Saturday afternoon. It was a very interesting meeting and was well attended. The president, Miss Charlotte A. Easton, presided over the meeting and the various reports which were read showed the Mission to have accomplished considerable good in our community during the past twelve months. The work of the Flower Mission is done so quietly and unostentatiously that none but the beneficiaries ever know of its deeds except when the reports are read at the annual meetings; but there are many of its charges who could tell you of the dainty bouquets, luscious fruits, substantial food and clothing dispensed by this body of young ladies. The report of the secretary showed that from May 5 to November 7 weekly meetings were held and during the winter months monthly meetings were held at which the various committees presented their reports concerning the work done between the meetings. During the year 1127 bouquets had been distributed, 121 delicacies, '86 bundles of papers, 210 baskets of fruit, 18½ baskets of provisions and 7 bundles of clothing. One-half of the bouquets were given by one person who also carried them to the Newport Hospital. For four months two families were supplied with milk, medicine and linen. Two poor women have been assisted to go to friends at a distance, rent has been paid for one family and coal supplied to another. During the summer 32 persons were taken to drive, 88 car and 20 ferry boat tickets were distributed. Sixty-five Thanksgiving dinners were given, and at that season nine families were given fruit and two vegetables. At Christmas seventy-two families received tea, sugar, fruit and candy and five flowers. Four of the Missions protégés have died during the year.

The treasurer's report showed the receipts for the year to be $312, expenditures $237.05, leaving a balance of $75 on hand.

The annual address was made by Rev. E. H. Porter of Emmanuel church and the musical and literary exercises which interspersed the business portions consisted of vocal music by Mrs. H. M. Spooner, piano solo by Mrs. T. W. Freeborne, piano duets by Mrs. J. P. Curley and Miss Outwater, violin solo by Mr. John O. Rogers, and a song by Mrs. Spooner with piano accompaniment by Mrs. Freeborne and violin obligato by Mr. Rogers.

The thanks of the Mission were extended to Rhode Island Lodge, I. O. O. F., for the use of the hall for the meeting and to all who had assisted at the meeting. Upon the report of the nominating committee the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President—Miss Florence Sanborn.
Vice President—Mrs. John D. Richardson.
Secretary—Miss Nettie Titus.
Treasurer—Mrs. George W. Thompson.
Managers—First Baptist Church, Miss Mary Carr; Second Baptist, Miss Caroline Stevens; Central Baptist, Mrs. A. W. Matthewson; First Methodist Episcopal, Miss Blanche Peckham; Thames Street Methodist Episcopal, Miss Young; Trinity, Mrs. D. T. Pinniger; St. John's, Miss Sarah DeBlois; St. George's, Miss Deborah Stoddard; Emmanuel Miss Jennie Davis; United Congregational, Miss Ethelwyn Wallace; Channing, Miss Mary Palmer; Presbyterian, Miss McLeish.

At the close of the business session a sale was held, Mrs. Philip Stevens, Mrs. F. W. Merrill and Mrs. Harry Wilson being in charge of the cake table; Mrs. L. K. Carr, Miss Sanborn and Miss Gladding, at the chocolate table; and Mrs. B. H. Richards, Miss Clifford and Miss Outwater at the tea table. Each article found a ready sale and netted a goodly sum to the Mission's treasury.

W. J. Underwood and R. W. Curry, the contractors, are making rapid headway on Mr. Harold Brown's new villa on Bellevue, Coggeshall and Hazard avenues, the walls already being up to the second floor. The building is of Rocky Farm stone, with Tiverton granite trimmings and when completed will be among the most attractive of Newport's palatial cottages. Mr. James B. Cottrell, who is supplying the stone trimmings, has been compelled to increase the force at his work on Warner street twenty-two men.

Among the appointments of Grand Regent Lloyd of the Grand Council of Rhode Island, Royal Arcanum, are those of Thomas P. Peckham of this city on the committee on the state of the order, Andrew K. McMahon on the committee on laws, George E. Vernon as district deputy grand regent for Coronet Council, William D. Sayer as district deputy grand regent for Conanicut Council and Abbott Chandler of Jamestown on the committee on appeals.

Hon. Thomas Coggeshall and Mrs. Coggeshall have returned from a visit to their son, Dr Henry Coggeshall, in New York.

Mr. T. W. Burden is at his cottage on Ocean avenue.

Mrs. Fanny Palmer and family have returned from Bermuda.

Mr. and Mrs. George R. Plumer have returned from their wedding tour.

Mr. E. A. Tower of New York has arrived at the LeRoy King cottage.

The Children's Home.

The twenty-seventh report of the trustees of the Children's Home has just been issued from this office. The report is a most encouraging one in many respects. It shows the balance in the treasury to be $2,337.67 on May 1. The cash subscriptions during the year have amounted to $300 and the cash donations $250. As is well known, the Home is Protestant but not sectarian and its Board of Trustees represent almost every religious denomination in the city. Children are admitted without reference to the religion of their parents or guardians and all are, necessarily, subject to the same rules and teachings while in the establishment. The increase in the number of applications for admission of children fully entitled to the shelter of the Home necessitated the enlargement of the Home building. So an addition has been built during the past year which has proved very pleasing to all concerned. Pending the completion of this addition the children were boarded out, but now they are all at home, making one large happy family. There has been no serious illness at the Institution during the year, two very slight cases of scarlet fever being the only instances to cause alarm. These were promptly removed to the emergency ward of the Newport Hospital. The holidays have all been appropriately observed and much enjoyed by the children, and their pleasure has been much added to by the many drives given them by kind friends.

A much regretted fact was the resignation of Mrs. Charles Hammett from the Board of Trustees after many years of faithful and valued service. Miss T. W. Woolsey, Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Mrs. Daniel D. Fearing, Miss A. E. King, Mrs. Gammell, Mrs. John Gray, Mrs. Coggeshall, Miss Emily B. Chace, Miss Mary LeRoy King, Mrs. Andrews, Mrs. LeRoy King, Mrs. Swinburne, Mr. Seabury, Mrs. Edgar, Mr. S. Koschny, Mrs. Bradford, Miss Maud Stevens, Mrs. Biggley, Messrs. R. & W. Franklin and the Newport Artillery Company have proved themselves friends of the institution by their contributions of necessaries and delicacies for the table, flowers, books, papers, clothing, confectionery, money and drives, and many other gifts have come to the Home from friends whose names were not made known. While it would be too much to enumerate all the gifts received, we think it interesting to note some of them. For instance, there were received 104 loaves of bread, 204 pans of buns, 213 pans of rolls, 20 baskets of doughnuts, 22 boxes of strawberries, 8 boxes blackberries, 3 baskets of peaches, 2 baskets of tomatoes, 1 basket of eggs, 2 bushel pears, 30 boxes of candy, 11 large frosted cakes, 6 egg plants, 2 turkeys, 3 coats, 2 dresses and books, flowers, and clothing in abundance.

A sewing chair was a very welcome gift at the Home and a large doll's house completely furnished was a most pleasing addition to the little ones means of enjoyment.

This institution is one most worthy of the attention of the people of Newport. The little ones under its care are provided with good homes, careful supervision of both their moral and physical welfare and in due time good homes found for them among worthy people where they may become good citizens.

The Controversy Still Continues.

Counsel for Caleb Eaton, who is endeavoring to secure the release of Millionaire W. H. King from the McLean Insane Asylum, appeared in the United States Court of Appeals at Boston Tuesday afternoon and made a motion that the authorities of the asylum be brought into court for contempt and that King be placed in the custody of some person designated by the Court.

The petition filed by counsel states that the McLean Asylum and one Edward Cowles, removed, aided, assisted and connived at the removal of King from the asylum at Somerville to the Butler Insane Asylum in Providence, which was in violation of an order of the Court of Appeals given in April that the McLean Asylum authorities were to detain King in Massachusetts until otherwise ordered by the Court.

The Court, after hearing the petition, ordered that King go into and remain in the custody of the Marshal of Rhode Island of the Butler Insane Asylum in Providence until further order of the Court. A hearing was set for Thursday next.

The Jamestown Cable Laid.

The long-talked-of telephone connection between Newport and Conanicut Island has at last been made and our Jamestown neighbors are within easy speaking distance. The cable was laid on Wednesday, and the line is now in successful operation as a part of the Providence Telephone Company's system. The cable, which carries six wires, is 5¼ inches in circumference, 1100 feet in length and weighs about 18 tons.

Ex-Senator Edmunds of Vermont was registered at Hotel Aquidneck on Tuesday.

The Newport Convocation.

The Newport Convocation held its quarterly meeting with Trinity parish on Wednesday. Archdeacon Tucker presided and Rev. G. H. Patterson acted as secretary in the absence of the secretary, Capt. E. O. Matthews. The clergy present included Rev. G. J. Magill, Rev. C. G. Gilliat, Rev. E. H. Porter and Rev. E. L. Buckey of Newport, Rev. G. H. Patterson and Rev. J. S. Pearce of Portsmouth, and Rev. J. C. Johannes of Tiverton. The lay delegates were: Trinity church, J. H. Cozzens, Dr. V. Mott Francis; St. George's, W. H. Sherman, F. S. Waite, J. L. Northam; Emmanuel, John M. Taylor, C. S. Burrell; St. John's, H. P. Williams; St. Matthew's, Jamestown, W. H. Schwarz.

Rev. G. H. Patterson reported concerning Conanicut Park mission, that members of the Lippitt family had given the Convocation the 30,000 square feet of land which they had agreed to do, and had also offered, free of cost, sufficient stone for building a chapel, the only stipulation being that the plans for the same should be acceptable to them. Suitable plans had been prepared, but it was found that $10,000 would be required to build the chapel of stone and $7,000 to build it of wood, and as both figures were larger than it was now thought advisable to spend, it was proposed to build a part of the proposed structure of wood, at a cost of $4500, leaving the building in such a condition that the remainder could be added. This proposition seemed a feasible one and the executive committee were now seeking the necessary funds. St. Catherine's class of St. Stephen's church, Providence, had given $25 for a communion service at Conanicut Park mission, which, together with the $13 added by the Convocation, was sufficient to buy a service such as he desired.

Rev. J. S. Pearce of St. Paul's church reported an increased interest in the work in his district. He has bought and nearly paid for a lot for a guild house. He desires $1200 with which to build the same.

Rev. Mr. Johannes of the Tiverton mission reported that it was desired by the people in his district to have a permanent church, and $1000 had been collected for the same. He wished, he said, to purchase a lot, erect a church for $1200 and mortgage the property. This proposition created considerable discussion and it was finally referred to the executive committee with power to act. The question of a proposed gift of a convalescents' home at Tiverton was referred to the same committee.

The mission at Block Island is now well established and its pulpit will be supplied this summer in the same manner as last. It was thought advisable to start a mission at Little Compton this summer and the executive committee were given power to secure a building in which services could be held.

In answer to a communication from the diocesan board of managers as to whether it was thought advisable to suspend the several convocation journals and unite in one diocesan paper or not, it was deemed best to continue the Newport Convocation Journal, since it gave general satisfaction and, if discontinued, would have to be succeeded by parish papers at a greater expense. The matter of stating how much each church would contribute for missionary work was referred to the executive committee.

A resolution was adopted, requesting the board of managers to recommend to the diocesan convocation an amendment to the missionary canon, to provide for the payment of the archdeacon's salary and expenses in the same way as that of the bishop, instead of from the missionary funds, as the archdeacon's work belongs properly to the episcopate rather than to the missionary department of the church work.

The treasurer reported regarding the assessments and payments of the several churches and showed a balance in the treasury of $219.81.

It was voted to hold the September session with St. George's parish. The officers elected were:

Secretary—Rev. George Herbert Patterson.
Treasurer—John M. Taylor.
Executive Committee—Rev. E. H. Porter, Rev. C. G. Gilliat, Commander C. H. Stockton.
Auditing Committee—John H. Cozzens, Freeborn S. Waite.

Mr. John Hathaway died at his home in this city on Monday after an illness of many years' duration. Mr. Hathaway was for many years a member of the police force, but has had charge of Travers Block since his retirement from the force. He leaves a widow and one son. He was a member of Rhode Island Lodge No. 12 and of Aquidneck Encampment No. 5, I. O. O. F., both of which organizations attended his funeral. Funeral services were held at his late residence Thursday afternoon, Rev. E. H. Porter officiating. The bearers were Messrs. Andrew Sutherland, Henry Fox and Peleg Frye from Rhode Island Lodge and Messrs. John Black, V. Mott Francis and Wm. Allen from Aquidneck Encampment.

Sunday was the fifth anniversary of the formation of the Epworth League in this country.

Tomorrow is Trinity Sunday.

'LECTION DAY.

A Grand Celebration Assured—The Matter in Hands of Competent Committees.

A number of citizens met in room 4 at the Gas Co's building Monday evening to consider the feasibility of a special effort for a big celebration on 'Lection Day. After considerable discussion, in which it was shown that from $1500 to $1800 would be necessary, provided the militia of the state was to be invited and a motion to go ahead was unanimously carried. The meeting then organized with Hon. Melville Bull as chairman, Mr. Chas. E. Harvey as secretary, and Col. A. C. Landers as treasurer. It was voted that an effort should be made to raise the necessary funds by subscription and Col. A. A. Barker, Col. John H. Wetherell, Sheriff James Anthony, Assemblyman-elect John W. Rogers and Messrs. A. L. Gilman, Robert S. Gash, John B. DeBlois, Frank L. DeBlois and Charles E. Harvey were appointed a committee to circulate papers and report on Wednesday night as to the prospects of success. Lieut. Gov. Bull, Col. Wetherell, Col. A. C. Landers and John P. Sanborn were then elected a committee on invitations, and Messrs Charles H. Burdick, P. S. Kaull, John B. DeBlois, Arthur L. Gilman and E. W. Higbee a committee on halls and collation.

Meetings of the committees were held Wednesday and last evenings and the reports proved highly satisfactory, showing the movement to be a popular one with everybody.

Invitations to visit Newport on Inauguration Day and help make the occasion a true old fashioned "'Lection celebration" have been extended to all the militia and independent military of the state and to the local Grand Army posts and all the civil organizations of the city.

As those who come from away as our invited guests will have to be fed and a good deal of room and a large sum of money will be required. Mr. Dennis W. Sheehan tendered the use of the first floor of his new business block, now in course of erection on Thames street, which generous offer has been accepted with thanks, and this together with Masonic Hall and Odd Fellows' Hall, the committee believe will give ample space for feeding all the visiting military, and the money necessary to provide the feed is being generously subscribed by our citizens.

The general committee on the celebration will hold a meeting this afternoon at which Adjutant General Dyer is expected to be present.

One week from next Tuesday will be the day, and, with good weather, there is at this writing every prospect of a grand celebration.

A rumor to the effect that Rev. J. M. Craig of the First Presbyterian church was about to sever his connection with that body, caused much regret among the people of Newport and the later rumor that he had reconsidered this decision was received with a corresponding degree of pleasure. Since his residence in Newport Mr. Craig has worked hard and perseveringly for the good of his church and has overcome what appeared at first to be almost insurmountable difficulties for them. He has won hosts of friends in this city by his pleasant manners, by his conscientious performance of duty and by his persistency in trying to carry to completion the beautiful new church building on Broadway. Mr. Craig is a man whom not only the members of the Presbyterian church but the citizens of Newport generally would be sorry to lose from their midst and it is sincerely hoped that he will remain with us for some time to come.

It is reported that Ex-Gov. Charles C. Van Zandt, of this city, is seriously ill at Brookline, Mass. He had been spending the winter at Lakewood, N. J., but as the climate there did not agree with him he was taken from Lakewood to Brookline a few days ago in a special car and he is now under the care of a physician. It is hoped that the change will do much to improve his condition.

Miss Alice Carpenter Thurston and Mr. Willoughby Ashton McLeod, of Everett, Mass., were very quietly married Monday noon at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Parker H. Thurston, on Ayrault street. The ceremony was performed by Rev. E. C. Bass of the First M. E. Church and was attended by the immediate families only. Mr. and Mrs. McLeod left on the afternoon train for Everett, where they will reside.

Parts of Massachusetts, Connecticut and New York State were visited by freezing weather Monday night and much damage was done to early crops. The mercury dropped below 20° here, and in some places on the island ice formed.

The Rhode Island Letter Carriers Association will hold its annual meeting and banquet at Odd Fellows Hall tomorrow evening. Mr. F. P. Gott, of the United States Hotel, will cater and it is expected that about one hundred will sit down to the banquet.

GLEANINGS FROM HISTORY.

Presented by JAMES C. SWAN.

The Siege of Jerusalem and the Death of Onias.

But Judas, seeing the strength of the enemy, retired to Jerusalem, and prepared to endure a siege. As for Antiochus, he sent part of his army to Bethsura, to besiege it, and with the rest of his army he came against Jerusalem; but the inhabitants of Bethsura were terrified at his strength, and seeing that their provisions grew scarce, they delivered themselves up on the security of oaths, that they should suffer no hard treatment from the king. And when Antiochus had thus taken the city, he did them no other harm than sending them out naked. He also placed a garrison of his own in the city. But as for the temple of Jerusalem, he lay at its siege a long time, while they within bravely defended it; for what engines soever the king sent against them, they set other engines again to oppose them. But then their provisions failed them; what fruits of the ground they had laid up were spent, and the land, not being ploughed that year, continued unsowed, because it was the seventh year, which by their laws they were obliged to let lie uncultivated. And withal, so many of the besieged ran away for want of things that were necessary, that but a few only were left in the temple.

And these happened to be the circumstances of such as were besieged in the temple. But then, because Lysias the general of the army, and Antiochus the king, were informed that Philip was coming upon them out of Persia, and was endeavoring to get the management of public affairs to himself, they came into these sentiments, to leave the siege, and to make haste to go against Philip; yet did they resolve not to let this be known to the soldiers or to the officers: but the king commanded Lysias to speak openly to the soldiers and the officers, without saying a word about the business of Philip; and to intimate to them, that the siege would be very long, that the place was very strong, that they were already in want of provisions, that many affairs of the kingdom wanted regulation, and that it was much better to make a league with the besieged, and to become friends to their whole nation, by permitting them to observe the laws of their fathers, while they broke out into this war only because they were deprived of them, and so to depart home. When Lysias had discoursed thus to them, both the army and the officers were pleased with this resolution.

Accordingly the king sent to Judas, and to those that were besieged with him, and promised to give them peace, and to permit them to make use of, and live according to, the laws of their fathers. And they gladly received his proposals: and when they had gained security upon oath for their performance, they went out of the temple. But when Antiochus came into it, and saw how strong the place was, he broke his oaths, and ordered his army that was there to pluck down the walls to the ground; and when he had so done, he returned to Antioch: he also carried with him Onias the high priest, who was also called Menelaus; for Lysias advised the king to slay Menelaus, if he would have the Jews be quiet, and cause him no further disturbance, for that this man was the origin of all the mischief the Jews had done them, by persuading his father to compel the Jews to leave the religion of their fathers. So the king sent Menelaus to Berea, a city of Syria, and there had him put to death, when he had been high priest ten years. He had been a wicked and an impious man; and, in order to get the government to himself, had compelled his nation to transgress their own laws. After the death of Menelaus, Alcimus, who was also called Jacimus, was made high priest. But when king Antiochus found that Philip had already possessed himself of the government, he made war against him, and subdued him, and took him and slew him. Now, as to Onias, the son of the high priest, who, was left a child when this father died, when he saw that the king had slain his uncle Menelaus, and given the high priesthood to Alcimus, who was not of the high priest stock, but as induced by Lysias to translate that dignity from his family to another house, he fled to Ptolemy, king of Egypt; and when he found he was in great esteem with him, and with his wife Cleopatra, he desired and obtained a place in the Nomus of Heliopolis, wherein he built a temple like to that of Jerusalem.

How Bacchides, the General of Demetrius's Army, made an Expedition against Judea, and returned without Success.

About the same time, Demetrius, the son of Seleucus, fled away from Rome and took Tripoli, a city of Syria, and set the diadem on his own head. He also gathered certain mercenary soldiers together, and entered into his kingdom, and was joyfully received by all who delivered themselves up to him. And when they had taken Antiochus the king, and Lysias, they brought them to him alive; both which were immediately put to death by the command of Demetrius, when Antiochus had reigned only two years. But there were now many of the wicked Jewish runagades that came together to him, and with them Alcimus the high priest, who accused the whole nation, and particularly Judas and his brethren; and said that "they had slain all his friends, and that those in his kingdom that were of his party, and waited for his return, were by them put to death; that these men had ejected them out of their own country, and caused them to be sojourners in a foreign land; and they desired that he would send some one of his own friends, and know from him what mischief Judas's party had done."

At this Demetrius was very angry, and sent Bacchides, a friend of Antiochus Epiphanes, a good man, and one that had been entrusted with all Mesopotamia, and gave him an army, and committed Alcimus the high priest to his care, and gave him charge to slay Judas, and those that were with him. So Bacchides made haste, and went out of Antioch with his army; and when he was come into Judea, he sent to Judas and his brethren, to discourse with them about a league of friendship and peace, for he had a mind to take him by treachery; but Judas did not give credit to him, for he saw that he came with so great an army as men do not bring when they come to make peace, but to make war. However, some of the people acquiesced in what Bacchides caused to be proclaimed; and supposing they should undergo no considerable harm from Alcimus, who was their countrymen, they went over to them; and when they had received oaths from both of them, that neither they themselves nor those of the same sentiments should come to any harm, they entrusted themselves with them. But Bacchides troubled not himself about the oaths he had taken, and slew threescore of them, although by not keeping his faith with those that first went over, he deterred all the rest, who had intentions to go over to him, from doing it. But as he was gone out of Jerusalem, and was at the village called Bethzetho, he sent out, and caught many of the deserters, and some of the people also, and slew them all; and enjoined all that lived in the country to submit to Alcimus. So he left him there, with some part of the army, that he might have wherewith to keep the country in obedience, and returned to Antioch, to king Demetrius.

But Alcimus was desirous to have the dominion more firmly assured to him; and understanding, that if he could bring it about that the multitude should be his friends, he should govern with greater security, he spake kind words to them all, and discoursed to each of them after an agreeable and pleasant manner; by which means he quickly had a great body of men and an army about him, although the greater part of them were of the wicked and the deserters. With these, whom he used as his servants and soldiers, he went all over the country, and slew all that he could find of Judas's party. But when Judas saw that Alcimus was already become great, and had destroyed many of the good and holy men of the country, he also went all over the country, and destroyed those that were of the other's party. But when Alcimus saw that he was not able to oppose Judas, nor was equal to him in strength, he resolved to apply himself to king Demetrius for his assistance; so he came to Antioch and irritated him against Judas, and accused him, alleging that he had undergone a great many miseries by his means, and that he would do more mischief unless he were prevented, and brought to punishment, which must be done by sending a powerful force against him.

He called special attention to the fact that the attendance of the regular day schools for 1894 is two hundred and thirty-eight larger than it was during the corresponding month of 1893. This great gain is probably due, he said, to the efforts of the truant officer, good weather and the attractions of the new courses in nature study and manual training. Free text-books, too, have been instrumental in securing more regular attendance of the children.

Reports were also received from Truant Officer Topham and Miss French, the drawing teacher.

On the recommendation of the superintendent a typewriter was ordered purchased for the office. The matter of assistance in the Kindergarten was left to the superintendent. The truant officer was directed to prosecute Oscar Young and Andrew Anderson for truancy.

The Search Light Failed to Find Them.

Admiral Gherardi, U. S. N., notified Capt. Converse of the Torpedo Station Tuesday morning that Torpedo boats Cushing and Stiletto would upon their arrival from New York between 9 and 9:30 that night, attempt to make the harbor without detection. The officers of the station were put on the alert and kept the entrance to the harbor well covered with the search light, but the attempt by the boats was successful, nevertheless. The boats entered the range of the search light a few minutes after the appointed time, but not till it was seen that those at the station were ready for the search. They stole over to the shore of Conanicut Island and passed along it to Rose Island, where they crossed the harbor and came into their anchorage, while the officers with the light were yet looking for them at the entrance to the Bay.

CHAPTER XXI.

We have made no note of time. A year of war seems to fly more swiftly by than a month of peace. The minutes of war are made up of its dead, its hours of burials, its days of battles, its weeks of campaigns which move a nation, its months of black figures relating the number of widows and orphans and the tens of millions of dollars expended, its years of despair and desolation crying to heaven.

Winter had fallen upon mountain and valley, upon the blackened ruins of once happy homes, upon blood spot and burial ground. While things had gone very quietly at Rest Haven they had not gone well. Now and then a detachment of Federals or Confederates had galloped past on the stony road, but they had left the family in peace. Letters no longer came and went. The country was in the hands of the Federals, and many of the inhabitants had fled away. The Percys would have gone before winter set in but for the state of the mother's health. They were waiting and hoping that she would so mend that she could be moved, but she did not.

One autumn night a party of raiders had taken away the horses, and after that Uncle Ben had to make his trips on foot as he scoured the country in search of provisions to keep the family going. In spite of the high prices and general scarcity of all necessaries he managed so well that nearly every want was supplied in some way. On two occasions beyond the one mentioned Federal reconnoitering parties left supplies at the house, and once Captain Wyle sent a store of articles which could have only been gathered at considerable cost and trouble. Both sides pitied the unhappy and defenseless situation of the family, which was only one of hundreds. The sufferings of the southern women during the war have found no historian, and the heroism displayed by them in the face of peril and adversity has not gone down to their children on printed pages. Who could write it? Where would he begin or end? In no epoch of history were mothers, wives and daughters called upon for greater sacrifices, nor were sacrifices ever so cheerfully made. Brave, patriotic, enduring, and yet no state or community has reared a marble shaft on which is engraved the words of praise and commendation so justly their due.

When Marian became convinced that if Mrs. Baxter had any plan afoot it was to play the spy and forward the cause of Captain Wyle, she did not let the matter worry her. A sort of truce was declared between the woman and Uncle Ben, and yet he did not cease to suspect and to watch her. He found out that Ike had been exchanged and had rejoined his company, and on two occasions he had good reasons to believe that the man secretly met her in the neighborhood of the house. Owing to the interruption of the mails, it was only at long intervals that Marian heard from Royal Kenton. For a month previous to the battle in which he was captured she had heard no word from him. When news came, it was from Captain Wyle himself on his second visit to the Haven. His company was acting as a guard for a wagon train of forage gathered in the valley, and his stay was brief. While his welcome was fairly cordial, he realized that circumstances were not propitious for any approach to the subject nearest his heart, and he forced himself to be content with generalities. Incidentally, as if the matter was of little or no moment to her, he mentioned the fact of General Jackson having become suspicious of Kenton and suggesting the detail which was made and of his having heard only a day or two before that the Federals had descended on the post and captured the entire Confederate command. What he added was both false and cruel—viz, that it was rumored that Kenton was among the Confederate killed.

If the captain hoped that Marian ould betray her real feeling, he was ot disappointed. As she received his nformation every vestige of color fled rom her face, and she seemed about to aint.

"You—you say it is so rumored?" he gasped.

"Only rumored, but"——

"But, you believe the rumor will be onfirmed?"

"I must say that I do. Mr. Kenton as, I believe, a friend of yours, and of ourse the news of his death will shock nd grieve you. He and I would also ave been friends but for his, to say the ast, disloyal conduct toward the cause for some reason best known to himlf espoused."

"Captain Wyle, you wrong him, ling or dead!" exclaimed Marian as she raced herself against the shock caused report of the rumors. "He enlisted ecause he was imbued with the same eling I hope you were—a feeling that owed allegiance to Virginia first ll."

"He has acted very strangely for a irginia patriot, I must declare," said e captain.

"How strangely!" she demanded as e color began to return to her cheeks d her eyes to flash.

"Every one in my company firmly lieves he joined us that the Yankees ight have a spy within our lines."

"And who made them believe it? oyal Kenton has periled his life in the use oftener than any man in your mpany or regiment! Tell me of one ngle instance where an honest, unsed man could have questioned his alty!"

"Why was he left behind, detailed guard stores, and that at General ckson's suggestion?" asked the capn.

"You are already possessed of that owledge!" she scathingly replied. There has been a conspiracy against n from the very outset, and it is not e fault of the conspirators that he was t assassinated before a battle had been ught!"

"Private Kenton, if alive, should feel grateful for such championship!"

"It is my duty to champion him! I am his promised wife!"

While Captain Wyle felt pretty certain that there was more than friendship between them he had hoped that things had not gone that far. As she stood before him and looked into his eyes and spoke the words which made his heart fall like lead he was dumb for a moment. Her face was set and hard, and he realized that his fate was sealed forever. There was but one thing for him to do, and he did it. Though rage and despair filled his heart, he did not forget the fact that he was a born southerner. It required all his nerve to take his leave gracefully, but he accomplished the feat, and it was only when he was in the saddle that curses passed his lips and his smiles were replaced by wicked frowns.

"Southern chivalry" has been held up to ridicule and scorn, but only by the ignorant or by those who had a purpose to accomplish. Chivalry was born in the heart of the true southerner; it came down to him legitimately in the blood. Now and then he may forget himself in the presence of a man, but never in the presence of a woman.

Had all been well at Rest Haven, Marian Percy would have given way to her grief and mourned as women do. But the mother's condition was still regarded as dangerous, and she must not even suspect the sad blow which had fallen on the daughter. Uncle Ben suspected some calamity from the grief in Marian's face, and from the fact that Mrs. Baxter dodged out and had a word with Captain Wyle at the gate before he rode away. He must have repeated the canard about the death of Kenton, for the woman's face betrayed great satisfaction as she returned to the house. There was a smaller house to lodge the "help," but just then Uncle Ben had it all to himself. About an hour after the captain's departure Marian appeared in the old man's quarters to find him cobbling one of his brogans.

"Look yere, honey," he began as she entered and before she could say a word, "I knowed when I saw yo' at de doah an hour ago dat sunthin had dun happened. Am de good missus gwine to die, or did dat Captain Wyle say sunthin to make yo' feel bad?"

"Uncle Ben, I have heard sorrowful news!" she answered as her tears began to fall. "Captain Wyle told me he had heard that Mr. Kenton was dead—killed over at Harrisonburg a day or two ago."

"Uncle Ben, I have heard sorrowful news!"

"I shall nebber dun believe it!" he exclaimed. "Dat Mars Kenton he doan' write no mo', but dat hain't 'cause he was dead. It's 'cause de possoffis was all turned upside down."

"But they had a battle a day or two ago, Uncle Ben, and Mr. Kenton was killed then."

"Whar was dat battle?"

"Near Harrisonburg."

"Dat's a right smart step from yere, an we didn't heah de guns. Mebbe dey dun had a battle, but dat doan' disqualify dat Mars Kenton was killed. Shoo, now, honey, but doan' yo' believe any sich story!"

"But I'm—I'm afraid it's true!" she sobbed, breaking down at last.

"See yere, chile," said the old man after a bit, with tears in his own eyes, "yo' jiss keep quiet till we find out all about it. I'll hev dis shoe fixed in 'bout 10 minutes, an den I'll start fur Harrisonburg. When I git dar, I kin find out if Mars Kenton was killed."

"But it's almost dark now, Uncle Ben."

"Makes no difference, honey. I know de road an am feelin purty good. By dis time tomorrer I'll be back wid de news."

"But what if you should discover that—that"——

"Dat Mars Kenton was railly killed? Nobody can't diskiber what hain't so, kin dey? I'ze gwine ober dar jest to prove dat he wasn't dun killed."

"Uncle Ben," said Marian as she placed a hand on either shoulder and looked into his eyes, "if you can bring me news that Mr. Kenton is alive, I'll make you a free man before the week is out!"

"Hu! What I want to leave yo' an de missus an becum free nigger for? Reckon I wants to go to de porehouse or jail? Hain't I allus bin like one o' de family? Could de family git along widout Uncle Ben? Whar would yo' be right now but fur me?"

"That's true, Uncle Ben. You were born on the place, and you know how much we all think of you. It would break our hearts to have you go, slave though you are and always have been in the eyes of the law. But you shall be rewarded, Uncle Ben. Only bring me good news, and your reward shall be great!"

"Hush up dat noise, honey!" he chided as he made ready to depart. "If yo'll let de ole man lib right on in de family, dat'll be reward 'nuff. I'll be back by foah o'clock tomorrer, and I'll bring yo' de news dat Mars Kenton am all right."

Marian watched him as he strode bravely down the frozen highway and vanished into the dusk of evening, and as she turned away fresh tears came to her eyes, and she murmured:

"Brave and unselfish old slave! God grant that he may bring a message to relieve my anxieties!"

CHAPTER XXII.

While Uncle Ben was slowly progressing along the frozen and slippery highway, and when he had reached a point about three miles from Rest Haven, he suddenly encountered about a dozen men, most of whom were mounted. All but one were in citizens' dress, and he at first supposed them to be farmers. They rushed upon the old man with a shout, and pistols and knives were flourished before his face as the gang cried out:

"Hang him up!"

"Slice off his ears!"

"Build a fire and roast him if he lies to us!"

"Fo' de Lawd, gem'len, but what's de matter?" asked the old man as soon as he could get in a word.

"We want them two Yankees!" shouted three or four men in chorus.

"W-what Yankees? I nebber dun seen a Yankee sence dat big army went by de house on hors'back!"

"Yo' lie, yo' old black faced devil!" said the leader as he got off his horse and seized Uncle Ben by the collar. "Now, then, tell us where they are hiding! Don't pretend to us that yo' have not seen 'em, for we know better! Out with it now, or yo' won't live two minutes!"

"What yo' mean?" asked the old man, who was badly upset over the sudden attack.

"We mean just this: We've been following two Yankee spies along the mountain nearly all day. One of them was wounded about an hour ago. They were headed this way, and yo' must have met them and know where they now are. Did they send yo' for a doctor?"

"Nebber, sah, nebber! I tole yo' de troof. I nebber did meet up wid nobody sence I started from de house!"

"From what house?"

"Dat house back dar which b'longs to Missus Percy. Mebbe yo' knowed de Percys of Winchester?"

"The Percys, eh? Are you a Percy nigger?"

"Yes, sah, an de only one dat's left."

"And where were you going?"

"Down to Harrisonburg, sah, to git news 'bout dat battle dey fout dar de odder day. I hain't seed a single pusson on de road, an if yo' was to kill me I dun couldn't tell yo' nuffin 'bout no Yankees!"

They had looked upon it as just a chance that Uncle Ben had encountered the men they were after, and their vigorous measures were intended to frighten the information out of him. While he was trembling and afraid, his tones satisfied the crowd that he was telling the truth. It wouldn't do to let him down too easily, however. The negroes of the country were breaking over all rules and regulations and traveling about at night to confer with each other and plan escapes to the Federal camps.

"Now, then," said the leader of the band, "yo' have had a powerful close call, and yo' want to remember it! Niggers have no business away from home after dark. Yo' were probably going to Harrisonburg to give yo'self up to the Yankees, but we'll spoil that little game! This will do yo' a heap of good!"

And thereupon, holding Uncle Ben with his left hand by a firm grip on his collar, he used a rawhide over the old man's back and legs with his right and administered the first whipping of his life. When his arm had grown weary, he stopped and said:

"Now, yo' make a beeline for home and don't stop to rest on the way! If any other prowling niggers ask yo' about that battle at Harrisonburg, yo' tell him yo' was in it and got licked! Geeup!"

As the old man headed for Rest Haven the gang of men rode in the other direction. He stepped out at a lively pace until hidden by the darkness and then stopped and turned to shake his fist and whisper:

"White man, I'ze only a pore ole nigger, but somebody has got to bleed fur dis! Nobody ebber put a whip on Uncle Ben befo' sence he was a pickaninny, an I'll kill yo' fur dat as shore as I ebber git de chance!"

He at first thought of resuming his journey toward Harrisonburg, but a moment's reflection convinced him that if he fell into the hands of the same party again his life would be in peril. He realized how much disappointed Marian would be, but he would return and report and perhaps make a new start. He had covered two miles of the back track when at a turn in the road a man stepped out from the rocks at his left and ordered him to halt and added:

"Who are yo'?"

"Uncle Ben Percy."

"What, is that yo,' Uncle Ben?"

"Fur shore, but I hain't dun met up wid no Yankee spies, jess as I told yo' befo'."

"Uncle Ben, don't yo' un know me?" asked the man as he came nearer. "I've talked with yo' many a time in Winchester befo' the war. I'm Steve Brayton."

"Fo' de Lawd! Yes, I 'member yo'r voice! I dun reckoned yo' was some mo' of dat crowd what was gwine ter kill me!"

"Hev yo' met up with anybody?"

"De Lawd forgive me, but I has! Back dar 'bout two miles a gang o' white men stopped me an war gwine to shute me dead an cut my froat! Dey said I had sawn some Yankee spies, an bekase I dun hadn't seen nobody 'tall dey giv me de moas' powerful lickin on airth!"

"Yankee spies?" queried Steve. "Ah, I understand! And are yo' with the Percy family, Uncle Ben?"

"Fur shore."

"Do they uns live nigh yere?"

"'Bout a mile away, sah."

"And whar war yo' goin when yo' met up with that crowd?"

"I'd dun started fur Harrisonburg to git news 'bout dat big battle. Dat Cap'an Wyle he was long yere today an told Miss Sunshine dat Mars Kenton was killed ober dar!"

"He did?"

"Yes, sah, an den Miss Sunshine cum out to me wid her face as white as snow an tears in her eyes an a big lump in her froat, an when I seed how powerful she felt I dun said I would go an find out dat Mars Kenton was all right."

"See yere, Uncle Ben, I've got sunthin to tell yo'!" said Brayton as he drew him out of the road. "Mars Kenton is up yere among the rocks and bresh!"

"Fo' de Lawd!"

"That gang was after the two of us, though we are not Yankee spies. Mars Kenton was badly wounded just befo' dark, and I had to carry he un on my back for a couple of miles. Uncle Ben, yo' must go to the house and git blankets and bandages and sunthin fur us to eat. Yo' must also bring that gal yere, but not tonight. Tomorrer will do fur her, but we must hev the other things tonight."

"Fur de luv of heaben, but how yo' do talk!" gasped the old man. "Den Mars Kenton he wasn't killed at Harrisonburg?"

"No."

"And he dun got shot tryin to git ober yere today?"

"Yes. Is Ike Baxter's wife at the house?"

"Her am, an she dun jest hates Mars Kenton."

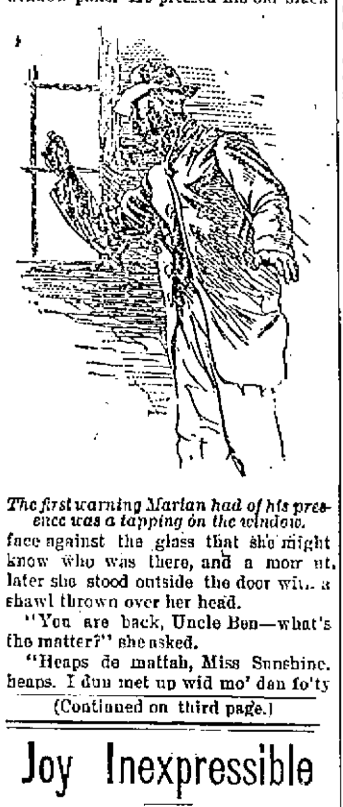
"Then yo' must be keerful. Try and see the gal alone. Tell her she must send the things tonight, but not to come herself till tomorrer. Go now as fast as yo' kin. I'll be waitin fur yo' right yere on this spot. Hold on a minit. Hev yo' got a gun at the house?"

"Yes, a double bar'l'd shotgun."

"Then bring it back with yo', and powder and shot and caps. If we hev a fout yere, it will be at clus range, and buckshot will be better'n bullets."

"Fo' de Lawd!" muttered the old man as he set off at his best pace. "Dat Cap'an Wyle he lie to Miss Sunshine. Den Miss Sunshine wants me to go to Harrisonburg. Den I meet up wid some gorillas an git switched till I smart like pepper. Den I start fur home an meet dat Steve Brayton an find out dat Mars Kenton hain't dead but hurted, an de Lawd only knows what's gwine to happen tomorrer!"

The invalid mother had fallen into a light sleep, and Marian sat thinking. She and Mrs. Baxter had taken turns at watching with the sick, and this was her night, while the other had gone to the help's quarters. Uncle Ben need not have been cautioned about Mrs. Baxter, as he felt that he thoroughly understood her disposition. He turned off the road to approach the house from another direction, and so softly did he draw near that the first warning Marian had of his presence was a tapping on the window pane. He pressed his old black face against the glass that she might know who was there, and a moment later she stood outside the door with a shawl thrown over her head.



The first warning Marian had of his presence was a tapping on the window.

"You are back, Uncle Ben—what's the matter?" she asked.

Another Boy's Life Saved

Health Blighted by Scrofula and Hip Disease

Perfect Cure, Happiness and Health Given by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Exeter, N. H.

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:

"I cannot praise Hood's Sarsaparilla enough for what it has done for my boy. Some four years ago, when six years old, George was attacked by hip disease in his right leg. We had to get him a pair of crutches, with which he was able to move about, but became badly deformed. We had to have his right leg lanced just above the knee. In a few weeks a second sore broke out, both discharging freely. Agonizing pains afflicted him, he could not bear to be moved, his growth was stopped and

He Was a Mere Skeleton.

He had no appetite, and it was hard work to make him eat enough to keep him alive. A few weeks later we had his hip lanced, and following this five other eruptions broke out, making eight running sores in all. We did all we could for him, but he grew weaker every day, although we had three of the best physicians. As a last resort we were prevailed upon by relatives who had taken Hood's Sarsaparilla with beneficial results to give the medicine a trial. We got one bottle about the first of March, 1892, and he had taken the medicine only a few days when his appetite began to improve. When he had taken one bottle he could move about a little with his crutches, which he had not been able to use for the preceding three months. We continued faithfully with Hood's Sarsaparilla, and in 6 months he was and go about the house without the crutches. He has now taken Hood's Sarsaparilla regularly for eighteen months, and for the past six months has been without the crutches, which he has outgrown by several inches. The sores have all healed with the exception of one which is rapidly closing, only the scars and an occasional limp remaining as reminders of his suffering.

Hood's Sarsaparilla Cures

Hood's Sarsaparilla in his case has truly done wonders, and he is daily gaining in flesh and good color. He runs about and plays as lively as any child. We feel an inexpressible joy at having our boy restored to health, and we always speak in the highest terms of Hood's Sarsaparilla." Mrs. Henry W. Murphy, Exeter, New Hampshire.

Medicine as Practiced by the Lower Animals.

It would seem as if man were surrounded by danger, seen and unseen, throughout his entire life. From the cradle to the grave it is a struggle. In the vegetable kingdom also the same struggle for existence is seen. Every flower has its destroying insect; for every shrub there is a worm and for the ripening watermelon the little colored boy lies in wait. But if disease threatens man on every hand, quietly close at hand is the remedy with healing power; and not only do the so-called inferior human races appear to recognize this, but even dumb animals, and it would seem as if the latter, in an empirical way, of course, practiced medicine.

Animals instinctively choose such food as is best suited to them, and to a certain extent the human race also shows the instinct, and medical men are sometimes at fault in not paying sufficient respect to the likes and dislikes of their patients. Women, as a rule, are more often hungry than men, and they do not like the same kinds of food; nevertheless, men and women are generally put on precisely the same regime, especially in public institutions. Infants scarcely weaned are given a diet suitable to adults, which they dislike, and which disagrees with them. Some years ago Delacriey investigated this question in the different asylums of Paris, and ascertained that children, although they will generally eat it, do not like meat before they are about five years of age. People who like salt, vinegar, etc., may generally be allowed to satisfy their tastes, within moderation. Lorain always taught that, with regard to food, people's likings are the best guide.

A large number of animals, such as elephants, stags, birds and ants, wash themselves and bathe. Launay lays down as a general rule that there is not a species of animals which voluntarily runs the risk of inhaling emanations arising from their own excrement. If we turn to the question of reproduction, we find that all mammals suckle their young, keep them clean, wean them at the proper time, and educate them—maternal instincts which are frequently wanting or rudimentary in women even of civilized nations. In fact, man may often take a lesson in hygiene from the lower animals. Animals get rid of their parasites by using dust, mud, clay, etc. Those suffering from fever restrict their diet, keep quiet, seek darkness and airy places, drink water and sometimes even plunge into it. When a dog has lost its appetite, it eats that species of grass known as dog's grass (chiendent), which acts as an emetic and purgative. Cats also eat grass. Sheep and cows, when ill, seek out certain herbs. When dogs are constipated they eat fatty substances, such as oil and butter, with avidity. The same instinct is observed among horses. An animal suffering from chronic rheumatism always keeps as far as possible in the sun. The warrior ants have regularly organized ambulances. Latreille cut the antennæ of an ant, and other ants came and covered the wounded part with a transparent fluid secreted from their mouth. If a chimpanzee be wounded, it stops the bleeding by placing its hand on the wound or dressing it with leaves and grass. When an animal has a wounded leg or arm hanging on, it completes the amputation by means of its teeth. A dog on being stung in the muzzle by a viper was observed to plunge its head repeatedly for several days into running water. The animal eventually recovered. A sporting dog was run over by a carriage. During three weeks in winter it remained lying in a brook, where its food was taken to it; the animal recovered. A terrier dog hurt its right eye; it remained lying under a counter, avoiding light and heat, although habitually it kept close to the fire. It adopted a general treatment, rest and low diet. The local treatment consisted in licking the upper surface of the paw, which it applied to the wounded eye, again licking the paw when it became dry. Cats also, when hurt, treat themselves by this simple method of applying continuous irrigation.—[Dr. R. E. Anderson.

He Changed the Text.

Many an interesting anecdote is told of Dr. ——, a famous divine, who has joined the great majority, and none is more touching or characteristic than one which was related of him by a former member of his church. "It was a great trial to the good doctor that such a large preponderance of his congregation consisted of fashionable people. Utterly unworldly himself, he had an immense contempt for the superficial life led by so many of his parishioners, who nevertheless crowded his church, rather enjoying the emotions excited by his fierce denunciations and the frankly, almost brutally, expressed home truths with which they were regaled from time to time. It was the first Sunday in Lent, and as Dr. —— ascended his pulpit and looked over his congregation with searching, piercing eyes, before beginning his sermon, there was a slight stir of anticipation in his audience. 'We shall have a regular tirade this morning,' whispered my husband, and Mrs. Midas, who was sitting a few pews in front of me, slightly shrugged her velvet shoulders as she glanced at her nearest neighbor. 'There was thunder in the air, and no one felt surprised when in ringing tones that filled the farthest corner of the great edifice the denunciatory text was given out, 'Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites!'

"In the pause that followed the atmosphere seemed more charged with mental electricity than ever, and the dominie was evidently just about to hurl us his fiercest invectives, when a very strange thing happened. Old T——, the sexton, must have slumbered at his post, for into the church and up the broad middle aisle walked timidly but trustfully a very little child, who, with her poverty stricken dress and general appearance, presented the strongest contrast to the richly clad assemblage. Awake to his duties at last, the sexton hurried after her, but the uplifted hand of the rector motioned him back, and on walked the little one in utter unconsciousness, until she reached the velvet steps of the pulpit itself, where she paused, and after an instant's hesitation sat comfortably down. An indescribable change came over the face of the preacher, and pushing aside the manuscript which lay before him he looked at us with kindly, benignant eyes. 'Suffer little children to come unto me,' he said softly, 'and forbid them not, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven,' and with a demeanor whose gentleness strongly contrasted with his late indignation he preached forgiveness and divine love and the charity that never faileth."—[N. SLOCUM'S OZONIZED Norwegian COD LIVER OIL WITH GUAIACOL

Perhaps you don't know what Guaiacol is, but you know something of creosote as a remedy for indigestion and other diseases. Well, is a refined form of creosote, and is made from the resin of beech trees. It stimulates a languid appetite as the air of the woods does. As long as they can and will eat, consumptives can fight their disease. That is why Guaiacol is combined with ozone, a very active form of oxygen, in Slocum's Ozonized Norwegian Cod Liver Oil.

All Sorts.

Seeing is not always believing. For instance, we see liars frequently.

Of all queer sights in a court room the cross-examiner is the querist.

Charlie Ross' brother has just been married. Thus another member of the family has been enticed away.

It is hard lines to win a woman with bonbons for a year and feed her on bread and butter for a lifetime.

The widower about to remarry is the most unselfish of mortals. He seldom thinks of number one.

"What'd that furniture dealer say when you told him that mirror he'd sent up was cracked?" "Said he'd look into it."

"The place was robbed last night."
"Indeed! What was taken?"
"Nearly everything. In fact, the only thing not disturbed was the watchman."

Elder sister—Ethel, don't lift your skirts so high. Don't you see all the men turn their heads?

Ethel (savagely)—Well, you'll never turn any heads with yours.

The white folks spend a great deal of time and money trying to curl their hair, and the colored people patronize every peddler who sells a decoction warranted to take the curl out.

A rather gayly dressed young lady asked her Sunday class, "What is meant by the pomps and vanities of the world?"

The answer was honest, but rather unexpected, "Them flowers in your hat."

It was Joseph H. Choate who noticed in a trial the other day that one of the jurors had been awakened by his energetic talk from a comfortable nap. "Excuse me," said Mr. Choate, with extreme courtesy, "I didn't mean to wake you up."

"No," said the young woman, haughtily, in response to his request, as they sat on the porch in the twilight, "I will not let you hold my hand. I don't believe in such conduct for a young lady. And, besides," she added, after a pause, "it isn't dark enough yet."

"Papa," asked Tommy Goodman, "who was Cain's wife?"

"Caroline," said the Rev. Dr. Goodman after an ominous pause, addressing his wife, "will you please hand me my heaviest slipper and leave the room. There is going to be a trial for heresy right here and right now."

Wickwire—What's the reason you are not sending your boy to school any more, uncle Mose?

Uncle Mose—He done got too smart. He larnt in dem books dat hot air allays rises, an he done went an figgered fum dat de place ob torment mus' be up above, whar de hot air all goes to.

Prof. Potterby: In the wild state the donkey is a most lively and cheerful animal. It is association with man that has brought to him his present solemn air.

Freshleigh: All I've got to say is that if civilization has had such an effect on him he was an ass for not staying wild.

Proofreader (up the speaking tube). —"Tell the foreman to have the proof I send up corrected—just two or three errors and a turned letter in the head line. Needn't send down a revise, I am going home now. Good night."

The next morning the editorial column bore the astonishing heading: "We would rather be tight than be president."

According to the assessment lists of the District of Columbia real estate listed at $11,600.000 is owned by 150 persons who are winter residents. The real value of this property is said to be about $30,000,000. Washington has been made a beautiful city, and rich men all over the country, notes the Atlanta Constitution, are seeking homes there during at least half of the year.

REV. A. J. DAY,
East Greenbush, N. Y.

Some testimonials may be doubted, but this one from a venerable Methodist Minister must carry conviction.

DANA'S AND KIND PROVIDENCE

Cured Scrofula, Eczema, and Purified the Blood.

A powerful preacher of the Gospel, Rev. A. J. Day, has been eminently successful in his several pastorates in the New York conference. He is now pastor of the M. E. Church at East Greenbush, N. Y., and in speaking of the use of

in his family says: "I have used this remedy myself, and consider it a splendid alterative and nerve tonic, but more especially do I wish to extol its virtues for what it has done for my wife and son. Mrs. Day was born of parents pre-disposed to consumption, and six of her brothers and sisters died of lung diseases.

The Scrofula Taint

manifested itself when she was 40 years old, when she had eczema on nearly all parts of her body. She suffered constant irritation and costiveness. My wife's habitual costiveness, eczema and scrofula in the blood has been entirely cured by

DANA'S SARSAPARILLA "THE KIND THAT CURES."

"I must say that it is a grand combination of remedies, and that my wife's great improvement is due to its curative properties and the blessings of a kind Providence on its use. My son was also troubled with Eczema, his arms being

ONE SOLID MASS OF SCABS.

He has been cured by Dana's Sarsaparilla so that his arms are clear and clean, and his general health is good."

Nearly a year later Mr. Day writes that his wife and son are permanently cured, which shows that Dana's really makes the blood pure.

Hens and Cows.

One could live very comfortably on a little 25-acre farm, with 15 acres of it in pasture and ten cultivated in a variety of crops, say a correspondent of the Country Gentlemen, and if his market was on the right kind, so that customers could be found to take at retail prices the surplus eggs, butter, fruit, vegetables, etc., a handsome income might be had from the farm. I think, however, that it would be wiser to have a few specialties to depend on for an income, and only grow enough of most things enumerated to supply the family wants. In deciding what these shall be, many things must be taken into consideration. Even on as small a farm as this, dairy and poultry growing might be combined, and all the land, and time and energies of the farmers devoted to them, except to grow garden truck for the family.

If near enough to a good market, so that cream can be sold for six months of the year and butter made through the fall and winter, when it will bring high prices, good cows will certainly return an income of $75 each, and $100 is within the possibilities. The poultry and cows will not interfere with each other, but on the contary, the milk either made into curd or used to mix the food of the fowls is a great help in feeding them. I cannot point out any line of farming more sure to give a good income than this, providing the necessary conditions exist, and one understands the management.

Poultry well-cared for is always profitable. I have this season raised over 200 young chickens and have sold eggs enough from 50 hens after using all we needed in a family of six persons, to pay for all the feed and leave some dollars in my pocket. This business is capable of being greatly extended—in fact, it is quite within the possibilities to produce a thousand dollars' worth of eggs and poultry on a farm of this size with an outlay for feed of but two or three hundred dollars mostly grown on the farm. I am not speaking at random of the profits of either dairy or poultry yard, for I know personally of men who are selling from $60 to $100 per cow—the latter case where cream is sold for a good part of the year—and of others whose sale of poultry products exceed $1,000 a year.

Floor Cushions.

New floor cushions are made in the brioche shape, and the resemblance to that old-time footstool is still further increased by the covering, which is in strips of red, blue, and yellow running horizontally. These cushions, which are the height of a chair seat and about seventy-two inches in circumference, are stuffed with excelsior, and a round of black leather at the bottom serves to make them durable. The cover is a Turkish tapestry, and they sell for $5 50.

The tapestry is $1.30 a yard (fifty inches in width), and the expense would be greatly lessened if the work were done in the house. Stout ticking or awning cloth should be used for the foundation, and a strip the required length sewed to a circular piece which measures about two yards around. Fill this tightly with excelsior, gather it up at the top with a stout thread, and fasten securely.

Sew the striped covering to a piece of black leather the same size as the circular piece of awning cloth, slip it over the foundation, gather in the same way, and with long upholsterer's needles run a strong cord through to the bottom and back again, drawing it tight, and fasten so that it will not slip. This gives a dented effect, like that with which we are familiar in the old-fashioned tomato pin-cushions. Cover a flat button mould, about the size of a silver dollar, with the same goods to ornament the top.

These cushions are intended principally for the piazza use, but will also be found very comfortable in other parts of the house.

Other floor cushions much less troublesome to make are in ordinary pillow shape, very large, and stuffed in the same way with excelsior or hair. They are frequently covered with small Turkish rugs, and are very handsome and durable. Stamped leather is also used for the purpose, but there is a linen goods which comes in solid red, dull green, and blue which would be quite effective, as would also the Madagascar grass cloth which is so popular for summer furnishings.—[Harper's Bazar.

Commodore Perry's Visit to Japan.

So great a man did Commodore Perry become in the eyes of the Japanese that they did everything in their power to please him. A building was erected a mile from the shore for the Princes to receive him in. The Governor of the province apologized to the captains because he could not supply such an armchair for the Commodore to sit in as he used in his ship: but there were none in the country. He was told that whatever sort of chair the Princes used would be satisfactory to the Commodore. Then the ships were moved up close to the shore. When the Governor protested against this, he was told that it was because a man of the Commodore's importance could not properly travel a long distance in a small boat; but the real reason for it was that as ten thousand Japanese troops would be present, and only three hundred men could be spared from the ships, it was feared that the whole American party might be massacred. We know now that the Japanese would not be guilty of such treachery, but we did not know them as well then. Before the Commodore landed all the decks were cleared for action, howitzers was mounted in small boats, and every preparation was made to protect the landing party if they should be attacked.

The three hundred sailors and officers landed first, and forming in two lines, made an open lane for the Commodore to pass through. Then came the two boys, selected for their fine appearance and manly bearing, and guarded by two immense colored men armed to the teeth. The audience with the Princes occupied only about twenty minutes, and few words were spoken, though many dignified bows were made. At a signal from the Commodore the two boys stepped forward and delivered their gold boxes to the officer appointed by the Princes to receive them, who had a handsome scarlet box ready for the reception of the important documents.—[Harper's Young People.

United in Misfortune.

Tramp—Give me a dime, please, I haven't had anything to eat in three days.

Citizen—Shake, old man. My wife's been doing the cooking, too, about that long.—[Detroit Free Press.

One day recently a Scotch publican was endeavoring to remove from his spacious bar one of his customers who had partaken not wisely but too well, when, noticing the shoemaker passing the door, he called to him to give him assistance. But the man of leather replied:

"Na, na, my man; when I feenish a job I aye put it in my window tae show my work; so ye can jist dae the same."

Farms for the Million.

The marvelous developments of the States of Minnesota, South Dakota, Iowa, Nebraska and Wyoming, within the last few years has attracted attention in all parts of the world. It is not necessary, however, to search far for the causes of this wonderful growth, for this entire region, which is penetrated by the North-Western Line, teems with golden opportunities for enterprising farmers, mechanics and laborers who desire to better their condition. Here are lands which combine all varieties of soil, climate and physical feature that render them most desirable for agriculture or commerce. Rich rolling prairies, capable of raising the finest quality of farm products in luxurious abundance, can still be secured at low prices and upon most liberal terms, and in many cases good productive farms can be purchased for scarcely more than the yearly rental many eastern farmers are compelled to pay. Reaching the principal cities and towns and the richest and most productive farming districts of this favored region the North-Western Line (Chicago and North-Western R'y) offers its patrons the advantages of ready markets, unexcelled train service, perfect equipment and all the comforts and conveniences known to strictly first-class railway travel. Maps, time tables, and general information can be obtained of ticket agents of connecting lines, or by addressing W. A. Thrall, General Passenger and Ticket Agent Chicago & North-Western R'y, Chicago, Ill.

SATURDAY, MAY 19, 1894.

This is going to be an old fashioned 'lection. All the absent sons and daughters will be cordially welcomed. Come one, come all and swell the throng.

The Friends Yearly Meeting will be held in Newport this year, opening on June 6 and continuing one week. It is expected that a large number of prominent Friends will be in attendance.

The committee on 'lection celebration is getting in some good work. Newport will entertain all the state on that day. There is no politics in the celebration of Newport's great holiday. Citizens of all political opinions join in the great occasion.

The Newport Herald is distrubed by a fear that somebody may twist what it poetically calls: "The British lion's friendly tail."—[Providence Telegram.

This is nothing new. The Herald has always shown a peculiar interest in the appendages of the British roarer.

Henry Watterson, in discussing the course of his own party on the tariff question, says: "It has resulted in weary months wasted to the business world and to the party, and, after it all, instead of a bill, redeeming the pledges they were commissioned to redeem, a mongrel piebald of patches and pusillanimity, a grotesque hodge-podge of pretense and pettifogging, a nondescript abortion of incompetency, selfishness, cowardice and treachery."

The sweeping conflagrations reported from different parts of the country during the past week have made Newport's recent narrow escape all the more conspicuous and our citizens must feel themselves especially favored. Talmage's Brooklyn Tabernacle was on Sunday reduced to ashes for a second time, while Boston, on Tuesday and Thursday, added two serious conflagrations to its already startling record, and Pawtucket suffered a $100,000 loss by fire on Wednesday.

The management of the Barnaby gingham mills in Fall River have shut down. Their reasons for so doing were given to the employes by the following notice which was last week posted in the mills:—

"To Our Employees:—Owing to the imbecile position taken by the present administration at Washington, and the idiotic legislation now going on in congress, the result of which you are perfectly familiar with, these works will shut down on May 12, 1894.

(Signed) S. B. ASHLEY.

All completed and uncompleted work will be paid for May 16, 1894."

The defeat of tariff legislation at this session of Congress will prove the death knell of both the present great parties and make the way clear for a Populist administration next time, a practical result of filibustering which cannot be looked upon with complacency by the friends of good government.—[Daily News.

You are entirely mistaken, neighbor. Defeat of tariff legislation by Congress means an era of prosperity such as this country has not seen in many years. It means the immediate starting up of thousands of idle mills, and the profitable employment of tens of thousands of idle men all of over the country. It means the triumph of the McKinley bill which carries with it protection to American goods and American workmen. It means, in short, America for Americans, plenty of employment and fair wages for its people and general prosperity everywhere. Let us try it.

His Excellency Governor Brown has ordered the entire militia of the State, including the regular brigade and all the independent companies, to assemble here on 'Lection day thus insuring the largest military display probably ever witnessed in Newport. These troops number 1486, and, under this order, they will of course come in full numbers, while with only the invitation of our citizens' committee it is doubtful if more than half would have accepted. This action of the governor is but a further evidence of the sincere interest which he has always felt for Newport and her ancient customs and that it will be appreciated by our citizens goes without saying.

The Providence Journal, with its natural hatred of everything which pertains to Newport, is trying to make it appear that the celebration on the inaugural of the new state government is purely a political affair for the glorification of the Republican party. The Journal knows better than that. If it don't we sorrow for its ignorance. For over two hundred and fifty years has election day been observed with proper ceremonies. Whether the Governor to be inaugurated be Republican or Democrat in politics, when he is once elected to that office he becomes the executive officer of the state and not of any political party and as such it is perfectly proper that all parties should unite in showing proper respect to the office. It is in that spirit that Newport people have always entered into the celebration of the occasion. When Governor Wetmore was elected the first time Democrats as well as Republicans served on the committee who got up the celebration. When Governor Davis was inaugurated, the first Democratic Governor in many years, the Republicans of Newport aided in the celebration, and on this occasion we believe that men of all parties in Newport are anxious to see a big gathering and a rousing glorification, and what is more we are going to have one, the Providence Journal to the contrary notwithstanding.

General Assembly.

The January session of the General Assembly still continues, and as yet no date has been fixed for adjournment, although the May session will open here a week from next Tuesday. Three meetings have been held this week—Tuesday, Thursday and Friday—but they have been short and unimportant. The Senate on Tuesday passed an act encorporating the Aquidneck Mutual Insurance Company of Newport and a resolution appropriating $100 for the pilot commissioners passed the House. On Thursday the Senate passed acts repealing the charter of the Narragansett Electric Railway Company and the law providing for state scholarships in Brown University and indefinitely postponed the act changing the method of electing license commissioners; the only business of the House was to count a quorum and adjourn, the Democrats finding themselves too few in number to tackle the question of unseating Mr. Cole of Pawtucket, and that gentleman will probably now be allowed to remain undisturbed.

The State Senate, which has a Republican majority, has sent down to the Democrats some half a dozen resolutions for final adjournment but which the latter body has ignored. Now the Senate has decided to wait till the House is ready to adjourn which will probably not be till the day before election. The Democrats attempted to rob the State of $7000 to pay the rump session of the House last summer, and now the keeping the Assembly in session a month longer than necessary at an expense of over $2000 a week is economy peculiar to the Democratic party. The action of that party during the past year has cost the state many thousands of dollars, and yet they talk about economy.

Married by Proxy.

Fr. Halpin performed a marriage ceremony by proxy last Friday night in New York. The first news of the unusual ceremony became public through a dispatch from El Paso, Tex., which read:

"F. F. Gearity, connected with Tefft, Weller & Co., of New York, died here Sunday night of consumption. He was married by proxy before his death to Miss Julia W. Morris of 96 Lexington avenue, New York, and made his will, bequeathing her his all."

Mrs. Gearity or Miss Julia W. Morris, when interviewed said, "It is true Mr. Frank F. Gearity and I were married on Friday evening last, my cousin Robert J. Hoye acted as Mr. Gearity's proxy at the ceremony.

"Fr. Halpin understood perfectly that it was a marriage by proxy. It was a perfectly legal ceremony. He looked into it beforehand. I have been engaged to Mr. Gearity for five years. His health failed him, and he had gone west to try to improve it. He first went to Colorado Springs. When he left this city he told me plainly that he would be back in six weeks. We were to be married when he returned. Mr. Gearity had little or no estate. I wish you to make that very plain. I wanted to marry him even at the last, because I wanted to see to his funeral."

One of the clergymen at St. Francis College when interviewed said: "Proxy marriages, though unusual, take place occasionally. Both from a religious and civil aspect I consider them legal and binding. Marriage is a contract as well as a sacrament. Other contracts are made by proxy and are binding; then why not marriages?"

Ensign Henry E. Parmenter and wife are the guests of Mr. Parmenter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jere Parmenter on Whitehall street.

It is said on reliable authority that the victorious yacht Vigilant and the steam yacht Atalanta, both owned by the Messrs. Gould, are being put in racing trim for the purpose of going abroad, the former to again try conclusions with the vanquished Valkyrie; and the Atalanta will undoubtedly carry a chip on her shoulder during her stay in British waters. It will also be practically demonstrated, says the American Shipbuilder that the Vigilant can show her heels to English yacht competitors in their own waters as well as on our "bloody mill pond."

The Young People's Union of the First Baptist church gave a strawberry festival in the vestry of the church Thursday evening. A very interesting programme of vocal and instrumental music was rendered, after which strawberries, cake and ice cream were sold and netted a goodly sum to the Union's treasury.

IN CONGRESS.

A Condensed Report of the Proceedings in Both Branches.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Republicans begun open filibustering in the senate because of a proposition for earlier sessions. Several amendments to the chemical schedules of the tariff bill were adopted. The bill is to be taken up every day at 12 o'clock hereafter. The naval appropriation bill consideration in the house brought about a lively tilt between Cummings and Reed.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—The senate debate on the tariff dragged wearily on, the Republicans nagging and harassing the majority and balking progress at every step.

Yesterday was district day in the house and several unimportant bills were passed.

The only important bill passed was one giving the Washington, Alexandria and Mount Vernon Electric Railway company an entrance into Washington.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—The senate further considered the tariff bill. The naval appropriation bill was passed by the house, and the agricultural bill was taken up.

WASHINGTON, May 17.—Further progress was made in the senate in voting on the chemical schedule of the tariff. The agricultural appropriation bill was discussed in the house.

WASHINGTON, May 18.—The house passed the agricultural appropriation bill. The senate was in session until 10:30 p. m. The Democrats failed in the attempt to secure a recess, instead of adjournment.

A Disastrous Fire.

PAWTUCKET, R. I., May 17.—The city was illuminated last night by the blaze from fully 50,000 tons of coal consumed in the disastrous fire on the river front yesterday afternoon. A conservative estimate places the losses at $500,000.

Brooklyn Tabernacle Burned.

BROOKLYN, May 14.—Dr. Talmage's church and the Hotel Regent were destroyed by fire yesterday afternoon. About 20 residences were more or less damaged by the flames. The loss will reach nearly $2,000,000.

AN INSECURE ROPE

Causes a Disastrous Carriage Accident on a Hill Near Brattleboro.

BRATTLEBORO, Vt., May 15.—A party of five women were driving from Northfield, Mass., to this place, with a pair of horses. At the Hunt farm, a mile south of the village, they stopped for repairs to a broken neck yoke, which was stayed with a three-quarter-inch rope. In the descent of Cemetery hill the rope stretched and slid back over the small shoulder of the pole, letting the load upon the horses.

The team ran furiously down to a jog in the road, where the carriage slued and overturned. Miss Blood's head struck an iron grating over the surface drain, and she died without a struggle. Miss Wardwell of Berlin, N. Y., Miss McNeilly of Northfield, Miss Mary Blood, an aunt of Miss Anna, and Miss Burt of Plainfield, N. J., were badly injured.

Miss Blood and two others were teachers in the Moody schools, while the other two were employed as matron and nurse there. Miss Burt is probably fatally injured.

Boston's $125,000 Fire.

BOSTON, May 17.—At 2.40 o'clock this morning fire was discovered in the five-story granite building known as State street block and occupied as the offices of the United States appraisers and as the United States bonded warehouse. Upon the arrival of the department the flames had gained such headway that a second and third alarm rapidly followed each other. At 3.05 a fourth alarm was rung in, owing to the combustible material in the bonded warehouse. The appraiser's offices and contents were ruined. The loss will reach [illegible]

Scalded to Death.

BOSTON, May 18.—Albert Bowie, aged 2 1-2 years, living at East Boston, died last night from the effects of upsetting a kettle of water over himself.

WASHINGTON MATTERS.

The Tariff Bill and Its 420 Amendments—Senator Hill's Verdict—Coxeyites Driven from the Capitol—A Big Month's Work for a Committee—The States Rights Question.

WASHINGTON, May 14, 1894.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

Never within the memory of the oldest habitue of the Capitol has the majority of the Senate allowed itself to be nagged by the minority as the republicans have nagged the democrats since those four hundred amendments to the tariff bill were presented to the Senate. Although Senator Brice claims that 43 democratic Senators are pledged to support the tariff bill after those amendments are adopted not a single democrat has had the courage to defend the amendments. The nearest any one of them came to it was when Senator Harris said: "The democratic party believes in a tariff for revenue with 'such incidental protection as revenue duties afford,'" but he had not a word to say when Senator Aldrich asked him what then became of the declaration of the last democratic National platform, that protection was a fraud and was unconstitutional. The democratic Senators are very much at sea, and none of them make any serious attempt to hide it, while Mr. Cleveland has gone fishing to hide his disgust. The republican Senators will caucus tonight to talk over their future course on the amendments.

Coxey's nondescripts were compelled by the health authorities to leave the pest hole in which they had been encamped, and being unable to secure any other place in Washington they are now camped in Maryland, five miles from town. The Marylanders do not relish their presence even a little bit and threats are being openly made of compelling them to move on. Sufficient ration to feed the men is getting to be a serious problem with Coxey; he has got about all from Washington that he will get, and the Maryland people say they don't intend to encourage their stay by helping to feed them. The argument for a new trial for Coxey, Browne and Jones, convicted of violating the law for the protection of the Capitol building and grounds, will be heard tomorrow. It is regarded as certain that a new trial, will be refused them.

Senator Hill, of New York, doesn't mince words in expressing his opinion of tariff bill number 4. He said: "Let the editor of Senator Gorman, for aught I care. One thing is certain, the tariff bill now before the Senate should never become a law. There is no justice in it, and it is simply subterfuge and a makeshift."

Hon. John Patton, Jr., the new Senator from Michigan, has made a very favorable impression upon his colleagues and the public. Although he had no actual legislative experience previous to his appointment as the successor of the late Senator Stockbridge, his wide general knowledge and his grasp upon political affairs have made him feel at home in the Senate, where he will certainly make himself heard later on.

It may not be entirely just to charge Representative McGann, chairman of the House committee on Labor, who offered the resolution, and a majority of the committee who voted to favorably report the resolution providing for the appointment of a joint Congressional committee to investigate the industrial depression, with demagogueism; but if that resolution, following as it did the hearing granted Coxey by the Labor committee, does not bear the genuine ear-marks of demagoguery it has some excellent imitations of them. It directs the appointment of a committee of seven—three Senators and four Representatives—"to investigate and report to Congress within 30 days the cause of the industrial depression responsible for so much distress throughout the country and what legislation will preserve industrial and financial conditions which will offer speedy, permanent and lucrative employment to the citizens of the United States." Think of the enormity of the task imposed and of the time given—30 days—within which it must be done, and you will see the point.

The House Judiciary committee, or rather the Democratic majority of that committee, has had another attack of states right fever, a disease often scotched, but never entirely killed, and the result was the ordering of a favorable report on a bill, introduced by Representative DeArmond, of Mo., providing that no judge of a United States court shall punish any citizen or officer for being in contempt for refusing to levy a tax or collect a tax for the payment of any bond issued by the municipality, county, or state, where the levying of such tax or collection is contrary to the laws of the state. This bill, if it becomes a law, will make the laws of a state paramount to those of the United States and the decisions of state courts paramount to those of the United States, which would be in accordance with the doctrine taught by southern Democrats from Calhoun down to the present day, a doctrine which four years of the bloodiest war in history should have for ever ended, but which somehow it did not. They Want Names.

The Russell Art Publishing Co., of 928 Arch street, Philadelphia, desire the names and address of a few people in every town who are interested in works of art, and to secure them they offer to send free, "Cupid Guides the Boat," a superbly executed water color picture, size 10x13 inches, suitable for framing, and sixteen other pictures about same size, in colors, to any one sending them at once the names and address of ten persons (admirers of fine pictures) together with six two-cent stamps to cover expenses of mailing, etc. The regular price of these pictures is $1.00, but they can be secured free by any person forwarding the names and stamps promptly.

NOTE—The editor of this paper has already received copies of above pictures and considers them really "Gems of Art."

A Kentucky woman who brought suit against a railroad company for killing her horse and her husband, got $150 for her horse and one cent for her husband. The jury took into consideration the fact that it is much easier for a Kentucky woman to get a new husband than to get a new horse. The market value of Kentucky men has greatly depreciated since the Breckinridge trial.

OFFICE 91 BROADWAY.

Mr. Wm. G. Ward of this city died at Cranston on Wednesday. Although in feeble health for a number of years, his illness was not necessarily fatal, until it took a more serious turn last week. Mr. Ward was one of the charter members of Rhode Island Lodge No. 12, I. O. O. F. and had always maintained a deep interest in all that concerned that Order. He was a brother of Judge H. N. Ward, Mr. George S. Ward and Miss Mary E. Ward of this city. He leaves a widow and three children, Mr. Wm. G. Ward, Jr., and Misses Annie and Elizabeth Ward. His funeral will be solemnized from Trinity church tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Mrs. Joseph S. Cottrell of this city is now in a critical condition, caused by a stroke of parlysis Sunday evening, and it is feared that she cannot recover. Mrs. Cottrell was, apparently, enjoying her usual good health on Sunday, on which day she attended church; but on Sunday evening she was stricken with paralysis and, although conscious, she does not seem to improve. Mrs. Cottrell is a most estimable lady and her death would be a sad blow to her aged husband and to her family.

STARTED BY BOYS.

A Tiny Flame Leads to a Great Conflagration.

Many Acres Burned Over and About Two Thousand Persons Are Homeless—Disaster Might Have Been Averted but for Two Great Blunders.

BOSTON, May 16.—Somebody blundered. That's why Boston had a fire which consumed perhaps $1,000,000 worth of property yesterday afternoon, burning over about 15 acres of ground, and rendering close on to 2000 persons homeless.

It may have been that there was a loss of life, but this probability cannot be verified; neither could it be positively disputed.

Just who the blunderer was will probably never be ascertained. Present indications are that he is sort of a composite picture of several individuals who will probably shift the responsibility from one shoulder to another.

As near as can be learned the authors of the trouble were some youngsters who were playing under the "bleaching boards" on the right-field side of the baseball grounds.

Some repairs had recently been made in that vicinity, and under the bleachers was a lot of rubbish, consisting of old boards, chips and the like. To this one of the boys is supposed to have touched a match in a spirit of fun, and from the tiny blaze thus originated sprung the conflagration. This was blunder No. 1.

Blunder No. 2 began when the spectators in the bleachers discovered the fire and tried to put it out themselves by pulling the pile of rubbish apart, a job in which they were assisted by several attaches of the place, when an alarm of fire should have been given. The firemen were not officially notified of the trouble until it was Beyond Their Power to Check It.

The high wind which was blowing at the time carried the fire over the fence, and into the tinder-box dwellings which adjoin the baseball grounds.

From these it jumped to others, until nearly every structure in the district bounded by Burke street on the north, the tracks of the Providence division on the west, Sarsfield street on the south and Cabot street on the east, had been razed to the ground. That is a rough statement of the case.

There are some few buildings standing, but many of these are injured to a greater or less extent, but they only serve to emphasize the general scene of disaster.

When darkness had set in last night the right hand side of Tremont street, looking toward Roxbury, was a picture for a painter. Beginning at Burke street and ending below Walpole street, and then extending westward to the railroad tracks, the vast plain which but a few hours before was covered by the homes of hundreds of inhabitants was with nothing to mark the homes which had existed there but the naked chimneys, around the bases of which the little flames still fitfully played.

It was a tough battle for the firemen. A strong northwest wind was blowing at the time, and this was the principal enemy which they had to encounter. It was that which carried the little blaze which, under ordinary conditions, probably would not have burned more than a few bleaching boards, over into the nest of dwelling houses, and then urged it forward with such rapidity that it seemed as if nothing could check it.

No Fatalities Reported.

The list of injured is large, although no case has as yet been reported fatal. A large number of the firemen were temporarily blinded from smoke and cinders. Fourteen cases of bruises and other injuries received by persons from falling bricks, glass, etc., were treated. Lieutenant Sawyer of chemical 10 was severely burned. He also had two ribs fractured by a falling rafter. Fireman Tolman of Everett was bitten by his horse. Ten persons who were sick in the buildings burned were also taken to the city hospital. Two cases were serious, but these are apparently none the worse from being moved.

Loss Estimated at a Million.

Prominent insurance men are of the opinion that not over two-thirds of the loss is covered by insurance. John C. Paige places the total loss at $1,000,000. The area of the burned district amounts to about 20 acres, and some 1500 people are thought to have lived in the dwellings consumed. There were at least 250,000 feet of solid buildings on the district.

The Cause of the Fire.

BOSTON, May 18.—Fire Marshal Flynn is satisfied beyond doubt that the South End fire was not incendiary work, but the result of carelessness.

The person that beyond any reasonable doubt establishes this fact is the boy whom Colonel Billings said told him that the fire had been set.

The lad's name is James Laskey; he is 14 years of age. His story was a straight one, and satisfied Marshal Flynn that he was telling the truth, and that he was the one to fully explain the origin of the blaze that developed into such a conflagration.

Jimmy said he had "sneaked" into the grounds and was watching the game from beneath the bleachers when he saw a man above him light a cigar and carelessly drop the lighted match to a stringer below. The boy further says that he notified a policeman, who placed a ladder against the fence and watched the blaze for some time before making any effort to have it extinguished.

Poetry.

The Kearsarge.

BY JAMES JEFFREY ROCHE.

In the gloom of ocean bed
Dwelt a formless thing, and said,
In the dim and countless eons long ago,
"I will build a stronghold high,
Ocean's power to defy,
And the pride of haughty man lay low."

Crept the minutes for the sad,
Sped the cycles for the glad,
But the march of time was neither less nor more;
While the formless atom died,
Myriad millions by its side,
And above them slowly lifted Roncador.

Roncador of Caribee,
Coral dragon of the sea,
Ever sleeping with his teeth below the wave;
Woe to him who breaks the sleep!
Woe to them who sail the deep!
Woe to ship and man that fear a shipman's grave!

Hither many a galleon old,
Heavy keeled with guilty gold,
Fled before the hardy rover smiting sore;
But the sleeper silent lay
Till the preyer and his prey
Brought their plunder and their bones to Roncador.

Be content, O conqueror!
Now our bravest ship of war,
War and tempest who had often braved before,
All her storied prowess past,
Strikes her glorious flag at last
To the formless thing that builded Roncador!

—May Century

Selected Tale.

HOW THEY PARTED.

MRS. LIDDIE CURTIS.

The mists of an October morning still hid the valley, but were spreading away, like a curtain, from the hillside, letting in a flood of sunshine upon a little, old, unpainted house, a house that would have looked cheerless and commonplace if seen with different surroundings, but could not seem either when seen, as it was, against a background of fruit-laden apple trees, and with its bit of a front yard ablaze with late asters and marigolds, and great drifts of red and white petunias, that half hid the path from the gate to the door-stone. But all this brightness of earth and sky contrasted sharply with the gloom in the house. Mrs. Marshton was washing the breakfast dishes. She was a little, fussy woman, whose faded blue eyes had never lost their look of childlike faith and trust, nor a certain kindly light, though her hair was heavily streaked with gray, and the lines about her mouth indicated a will of her own. Her husband sat by the fire greasing his boots, his usually placid face wearing a look of helplessness, trouble and bewilderment, as he paused in his work and said:

"So you're tired of me, be you Polly? Is that what you said?"

"Yes, that's what I said, David;" here she paused to steady her voice. "I can't stand your shiftless ways no longer."

"Well, Polly, you've said some pretty pi'nted things to me, one time an' another; but I d'know as you've ever told me right out an' out before as you was tired of me. Seems as tho you didn't quite mean it now. Seems as tho mebbe you're kind of put out an' talk stronger than you mean."

"Well, I do mean it. My patience is clean worn out. Here be I a-workin' an' a-slavin' week in an' week out, an' you jest a-lettin' every blessed thing go to rack an' ruin. Goodness only knows where you expect we'll land at this rate. In the poor house I guess. P'tatoes that ought, by good right, to've been dug two weeks ago, jest a-rottin' in the ground. Not a single cornstalk cut yit. Every squash'll git froze. Beans a-mildewin'. Not an apple gathered, an' you jest a-spendin' every minit of your time gittin' drunk with that good for nothing Sam Sloan."

"Now, Polly, that ain't hardly fair. You know I ain't seen Sam Sloan in a month till he come over yisterday to borrow some fish hooks; an' I didn't git drunk with him, neither." Here David's eyes were lowered to the boots and grease can. "He wanted me to take a drink with him out of a bottle he had, an' I couldn't very well refuse, seein' as how he was a neighbor and hadn't been over in so long. He is"—

Here Polly faced about with the dishcloth in her hand. "He can't stay away none too long to suit me; not if if he stays till doomsday," she snapped out. "I ain't never had no use for Sam Sloan, an' I don't think much of them that has. An' I know jest as well as that you're a-settin' there, David, that you had more'n one drink."

David did not raise his eyes from the grease can. "Oh, I ain't a denyin', Polly, that we took a little more when he was a-leavin'. I told Sam I guess I'd better not; that it might fly to my head so as't I couldn't work; but he 'lowed my system needed stimulus, an' it would jest brace me up. But it didn't."

The last sentence was uttered in a tone that indicated, not only David's disappointment, but a feeling of personal injury, as he recalled the manner in which he seemed to have been defrauded of the promised, and naturally to be expected, "bracing." But if he had expected that this excuse would soften Polly's wrath, he did not need any words to show him that he had made a mistake; the swish of skirts and quick step which he heard, as she turned, did that. Involuntarily he bent his head, as though to examine the patch on the boot in his hand, as she said:

"No; I should say it didn't. When I got home, at dark, jest about tuckered out after workin' at the hotel all day, there you was a settin' in the rockin' chair, with your head on the table fast asleep. The fire out an' not a chore done. The hull afternoon spent in carousin'."

"There wasn't much carousing about it, Polly. Sam didn't stay more'n an hour; an' I couldn't do much carousin' when I was asleep, could I?"

"No matter, I call that carousin'."

The decided manner in which Polly hung up the frying pan just then made David think he had better yield that point.

"An' this mornin'," she continued, "your head aches, an' you've got a stiff neck an' a crick in your back from bein' crooked over that table so long, an', of course, there ain't no more work for you for a week."

"Oh, never mind, Polly; I'll soon git over that! An' then I could go right over at it, an' do up all the fall work in no time. I could cut that hull patch of corn in one day, an' bring in the squashes besides." Here he tried to draw up his bent shoulders and back, but an unusually sharp twinge of pain warned him that words were the better part of valor for him. "I told Sam yesterday that I should be awful busy now for quite a spell, an' couldn't nohow go over to none of them Red Men's meetin's—that I hadn't no time."

"That you hadn't no time! Well, David Marston, you might of told him I wouldn't let you."

"I didn't want to say that, because he told me once that I dassent say my sol was my own."

"Much you was a-thinkin' of your soul when you got in with that set! That was more of your foolishness. I couldn't leave you for two days, whilst I went over to Brenton, 'thout your goin' an j'inin that show."

"It ain't no show, Polly."

"What's it for then?"

"Sam says it's an Order of Red Men. A secrit sassiety for a little sosbil ricreation."

"Sosbil fiddlestick! I tell you they are jest a practice' for a Wild Injin show; that's what they are. An' if I hadn't put a stop, right on the spot, to your a-goin', they'd 'a had you a-traipsin' 'round the country by this time a hootin' an a yellin' an a scalpin'. Nice you'd 'a' looked; a man old enough to know better, an' a church member too! There's no tellin' what you'll be up to next—a nigger show, as like's not. Seems as tho I only got you out of that wild Injun thing in time for Sam to make a fool of you." The tone of voice, in which this was said, seems to be intended to convey the idea that if there was any difference between personating an Indian in a show and drinking with Sam Sloan, that difference was not in favor of the latter. Just a shade of sorrow was mingled with the anger in her voice as she added: "It seems, David, as tho no saving grace could keep you out of the road that leads to ruin."

"Yes, I was always a powerful han' at backslidin'. Seems as tho I couldn't help it, some way. Guess I've backslid more'n a hundred times. But, Polly, you've managed to git along with me some way for a good many years 'thout really gittin tired of me till now. Mind' I don't say but that you're right about it. I ain't no call to find fault with what you say. You always could see your way clearer'n most people. I don't want to be no burden to you, nor stay where I ain't wanted. When I git my boots greased, I'll put my clothes in the carpibag, an' git my other hat from upstairs, and then start for Carbonville. Jest as like as not I can git something to do in them mines."

Polly looked frightened at this, and paused in her work of drying the coffeepot, and opened her lips as if about to speak; then seeming to change her mind, set the coffeepot on the pantry shelf without a word.

The boots were put on with some difficulty—owing to the lame back—and the carpetbag was soon ready—David's wardrobe was not an extensive one; and then he went upstairs. When he came back with "the other hat" Polly saw, as she took a side-long glance, that during his absence from the room he had placed something heavy in the breast-pocket of his coat and carefully pinned up the pocket. They had never owned a pistol, and never had any use for a pistol; but could Sam have loaned David one? It was hardly possible, and yet what else could it be? Sam could certainly be expected to do anything he ought not to do. Before taking up the carpetbag he asked Polly if she thought she could milk the cow. The flies bothered so they made the cow "res'less like," he said. "An' Polly, don't forgit to cover up the tomatoes to-night, for unless it should come on to be cloudy there'll be a frost as sure as preachin'."

Then he crossed the kitchen to the mantelpiece, pretending to look for his pipe, which he knew was in his pocket, and, on the way back, hung up the bootjack and put away the can of grease. Seeing then no further excuse for lingering, he took up the carpetbag and went out. He stood for a moment to gaze far away, hesitating and shrinking from something new and strange which he seemed to see in the world beyond the doorstone. As he closed the gate he turned and looked back and said "Good by."

Polly hung up the dishpan, and then looked after him in utter amazement. She was in earnest, or thought she was tired of him; but she had never thought he really would, or that she wanted him to go. During all the years they had lived together his careless, easy ways had fretted her, but never had she felt quite so discouraged. The "carousin'" of the day before had been too much for her naturally hopeful disposition. David's intentions were good always good. He was not a drunkard, not even what would be called a "drinking man"; but the days were always too short for him, and Sam Sloan's free and easy ways and persuasive tongue had always had, and perhaps always would have an irresistible fascination for him.

Still angry, and perhaps a little conscience-stricken, Polly hurriedly put the little kitchen in order; then taking her sunbonnet and shawl from their nail behind the door, she prepared to go out to her day's work. After locking the door, the key, from sheer force of habit, was put in the usual hiding place under the doorstone. More miserable than she had ever been before, and half blinded by tears she walked to the village.

She did her work as well as usual, but in an almost mechanical way; her thoughts all day either with that lonely traveler on the way to Carbonville, or in the little, still house she left in the morning.

It was after five o'clock when she set out on her way home. The sunshine and bright sky of the morning had given place to dark clouds and a rapidly shortening twilight. A cold, drizzling rain was falling. Polly had always indulged in fancies about rain, but would hardly have acknowledged it in those words. The rain inspired the hymns she sang. When it fell in great wind-swept sheets she had been won to see, in imagination, a great army of soldiers marching to battle, with waving banners, martial music, and all the pomp and circumstance of war. Then her voice rang out—as well as that thin, piping treble could ring—with "Hold the Fort" or "Onward Christian Soldiers." And, busy about her household duties, she marched triumphantly between cook stove and pantry, with a step that was so like, yet so unlike, a military step, that it was but just saved, by her almost pathetic sincerity, from being ridiculous. When the thunder of battle was over and she heard in the winds and sobbing rain only the sighs and plaint of the wounded and vanquished, she sang, in a quavering, sympathetic voice:

> "Come ye disconsolate, where'er ye languish."

When soft summer rain fell with the soothing, dreamy sound of a lullaby she sang, in a voice more even now:

> "My peace like a river grows deeper and deeper."

To-night, true to the old habit, as she looked out along the lonely road, she repeated, half aloud, the words of the hymn beginning:

> "I am sad and heavy hearted;
> No refuge on earth for me."

The way had never seemed so long or her feet so tired. (She had often gone over the road as late as this; but then David always came to meet her if the night was dark, and a light in the kitchen window could be seen when she reached the corner, which was half-way home. To-night there would be nothing to shorten the way. And how was she to find the cow in the darkness and rain? She was too tired to make a fire or get supper, and thought she would go to bed without either. David ought to have known she could not live alone. The "carousin'" of the night before did not seem so unpardonable an offense when she remembered that it was the only time he had failed to have the chores done and a warm supper waiting for her. What could be be thinking of, at his age, to want to work in a mine? Perhaps he had been suffocated by firedamp by this time, or walled up in some long-forgotten passageway. There was always something happening—something terrible—in a mine. And what of that pistol—it must have been a pistol—in his pocket. David was not used to firearms, and could not be expected to be on his guard against the treachery and bloodthirstiness of those fearfully and wonderfully made things. It might have gone off suddenly and unexpectedly—might even have blown his whole head off. And she involuntarily closed her eyes as though shutting out the ghastly sight.

By this time her shoes were wet through, and as she turned the corner the wind blew her wet sunbonnet across her face, and for a moment shut out the dim outlines of the road before her. She stopped to fold back the bonnet and wipe the tears and rain from her face, and then, looking up, stood in a doubting, questioning amazement. There was a light in the window. What could it mean? Could David really be there? The darkness, cold and rain were quite forgotten as she hurried along the muddy road, through the gate, and up the path between the rain-splashed flowers; still keeping the light—the welcome light—in view, until she opened the door and stood within the kitchen. Could this be the room she had pictured to herself when she started for home? Here was light and warmth in place of the darkness and cold. The supper table was set as usual, and an appetizing odor of baked potatoes, tea and stewing apples, filled the room. And most wonderful of all, there was David hurrying in through the back door, with the milk pail, and in the cheeriest voice—seemingly forgetful of all the perils of the day—telling her why he had not gone to meet her.

"I 'lowed I should certainly git to the corner," he said; "but that pesky cow was away off in the back lot an' wouldn't come for no callin'. So I jest had to foot it all the way over there after her. But, Polly, come right up to the fire an' set down in the rockin' chair, whilst I hang up your wet bunnit an' shawl. It beats all how wet you air! Here, let me take off your wet shoes an' put them on the wood box to dry. I jest knowed how it would be when I see it comin' on to rain; that you couldn't noways in reason milk the cow nor have things comfortable-like here, as they ought to be, an' so I jest hurried back from Tom'rack Swamp as fast as I could tramp. Me and John Baker went over there to look for a bee tree. I met him out near the corner, an' nothin' would do but I must come along. He says I can find a bee tree easier'n any man he knows; an' I guess he's about right about it. At any rate, I found this one. I am awful smart at findin' bee trees. It's a good one, too. John 'lows there's two hundred pounds of honey in it. One hundred for him an' one hundred for us. We're goin' back in the mornin' with John's horse an' wagin, if nothin' happens to hender, to bring it home. You never see anybody quite so tickled as John is. Say's he's eat buckwheat cakes two winters 'thout honey, an' he don't want to do it ag'in. I told him you'd be jest as glad as him, for you'd been kinder hankerin' after honey all fall."

Here Polly suggested that they exchange some of it at the village store for coffee and tea. And while talking of the honey, the rough road to the swamp and John Baker, the supper was eaten and the milk strained, and then they began to look for something to bring the honey home in. As David started to go upstairs for the wash-boiler, which Polly thought would be "jest the thing," she said: "An' as you're agoin' up. David, you may as well take your other hat an' the carpitbag; there ain't no use havin' them layin' 'round."

As the stair door swung shut after him, his coat, which had been hanging from a nail on the door, fell to the floor, and something heavy rolled from the pocket and under the rocking chair. Polly, remembering the pistol, was too much frightened to scream, and stood listening in terror. Then, not hearing the almost endless succession of shots, which she had expected would follow, she cautiously stooped and looked under the chair. When she rose to her feet she held in her hand an old fashioned case containing a tintype of herself. The expression on her face would have been hard to analyze. There was something of pity, relief and gladness in it, not unmixed with a little amusement; but not a trace of the hard, unforgiving spirit of the morning.

As David was coming down the stairs she replaced the picture in the pocket, and hung the coat back on its nail.

An hour after, when she opened the kitchen door to empty the dishpan, she looked out upon a bright moonlight night. The rain had ceased. As she returned and hung up the pan, she was singing softly to herself, in a voice that suggested tears:

> "If we err in human blindness,
> And forget that we are dust;
> If we miss the law of kindness
> When we struggle to be just.
> Snowy wings of peace shall cover
> All the pain that hides away,—
> When the weary watch is over,
> And the mists have cleared away."

A Great Speech.

A lawyer, whose eloquence was of the spread eagle sort, was addressing the jury at great length, and his legal opponent, growing weary, went outside to rest.

"Mr. B—— is making a great speech," said a countryman to the bored counsel.

"Oh, yes, Mr. B——always makes a great speech. If you or I had occasion to announce that two and two make four, we'd just be fools enough to blurt it right out. Not so, Mr. B——. He would say:

"If, by that particular arithmetical rule known as addition, we desired to arrive at the sum of two integers added to two integers we should find—and I assert this boldly, sir, without fear of successful contradiction—we, I repeat, should find by that particular arithmetical formula before mentioned—and, sir, I hold myself perfectly responsible for the assertion I am about to make—that the sum of the two given integers added to the other two integers would be four."

The case of the honest Irish servant who could never understand why his master perpetually required him to wash his chaise, since he went directly out and muddied it up again, is paralleled by an actual reply by a dull boy to an examiner in a French school.

The pupil had passed a wretched examination in French history.

"What do you mean by this?" asked the instructor. "Why don't you study your history?"

"What's the use?" drawled the pupil; "they're never going to get it finished, They're making it now!"—[Boston Herald.

"I am very much afraid," said the good old parson as he was admonishing his flock, "that unless you mend your ways some of you, when Gabriel blows his trumpet, will come out at the little end of the horn."

Recipes for the Table.

BROWN BREAD.—Three pints of Indian meal, three pints of rye meal (both measured after sifting), one teaspoonful of salt. Mix them well together. Add one cupful of molasses, half a teaspoonful of soda and half a cup of yeast. Then mix the whole together with luke-warm water. Pour it into an iron kettle, and let it stand until it begins to crack on the top. Put it into a moderate oven, and let it bake five or six hours. Use unbolted Indian meal. The secret of this brown bread lies in having the meal coarse.

OYSTER PATTIES—One pint of cream, one quart of oysters, one tablespoonful of cornstarch, the yolks of two eggs, well beaten, one-quarter of a teaspoonful of mace, salt and pepper to taste. Let the cream come to a boil. Mix the cornstarch with a little cold milk and stir into the boiling cream. Add the seasoning. While the cream is cooking, let the oysters come to a boil in their own liquor. Skim carefully and drain off all the liquor. Cut each oyster in three or four pieces. Add the oysters to the cream and boil up once. Stir in the beaten yolks and take from the fire. Fill the patty shells and serve. The quantities given will fill twenty shells.

APPLE PIE.—One quart of sliced apples, one teacup of water, one of sugar, half a nutmeg, yolk of one egg, a little sugar and milk, puff paste. Peel and slice the apples, add the water, sugar, peel of half a lemon grated and the nutmeg. Stew until tender, and set it away to cool. Line a shallow tin pie dish with a good paste, put in the stewed apple half an inch deep. Roll out some of the paste, wet it over with the yolk of an egg beaten with a little milk and a tablespoonful of powdered sugar; cut it into very narrow strips and lay them in cross bars or diamonds across the pie; lay another strip around the edge. Trim off the outside neatly with a sharp knife until the paste loosens from the dish.

CHEAP SPONGE CAKE.—Three eggs, two tablespoonfuls of water and a teacupful of sugar, mixed together. One and a half cups of flour, two teaspoonfuls baking powder and a pinch of salt, stirred in quickly. Season with a teaspoonful of vanilla or juice of half a lemon. Bake in three jelly pans in a quick oven. For the filling, grate two good-sized apples, add the grated peel and juice of one lemon, one well-beaten egg, and sugar to taste. Boil five minutes and spread between the layers. This is very good if eaten fresh.

AUNT CHLOE'S FRIED CHICKEN.—Cut up the chicken an hour before cooking and lay it in salt and water. Take it up, wipe and dip it in a batter made of two eggs, a little flour, pepper, and a little nutmeg. Fry in part lard and part butter. Put the chicken on a hot dish. Pour off the contents of the spider, and make a gravy of cream, butter, salt, pepper, and a little nutmeg, thickened with flour wet in a little cold milk. Let it boil up and pour over the chicken.

CURRY OF COLD ROAST BEEF.—Cut some slices of cold roast beef into rather small, square pieces, and dredge them with flour. Slice a small onion and fry it a light brown in one heaping tablespoonful of butter, then pour in a quarter of a pint, or as much as you may require of the gravy from the meal, or gravy made from the bones and trimmings of meat. Add one tablespoonful of curry powder and the slices of meat. Set it over a brisk fire and stir it well together for ten or twelve minutes. Serve it with a border of rice round the dish, or rice in a separate dish.

SCALLOPED EGGS.—Make a forcemeat of finely-minced ham or tongue, fine bread crumbs, pepper, salt, a little minced parsley, and some melted butter; moisten with milk to a fine paste, and half fill some patty pans or scallop shells with the mixture. Break an egg carefully upon the top of each, dust with pepper and salt, sift some finely powdered cracker over all, put several bits of butter over the top of each egg, and put in the oven and bake till the eggs are well set, which will be in about eight minutes. Serve hot.

Pitcher's Castoria.

A Bright Lad,

Ten years of age, but who declines to give his name to the public, makes this authorized, confidential statement to us:

"When I was one year old, my mamma died of consumption. The doctor said that I, too, would soon die, and all our neighbors thought that even if I did not die, I would never be able to walk, because I was so weak and puny. A gathering formed and broke under my arm. I hurt my finger and it gathered and threw out pieces of bone. If I hurt myself so as to break the skin, it was sure to become a running sore. I had to take lots of medicine, but nothing has done me so much good as Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It has made me well and strong."—T. D. M., Norcatur, Kans.

WORKING WOMEN.

THEIR HARD STRUGGLE

Made Easier by the Timely Intervention of One Woman.

(SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.)

All women work. Some in their homes, some in church, and some in the whirl of society. Many in stores, mills, and shops, tens of thousands are on the never ceasing treadmill earning their daily food.

All are subject to the same physical laws; all suffer alike from the same physical disturbance; and the nature of their duties in many cases quickly drifts them into the horrors of all kinds of female complaints—ovarian troubles, inflammation, ulceration, falling and displacement of the womb, leucorrhœa, or perhaps irregularity or suppression of "monthly periods"—causing severe backache, nervousness, irritability and lassitude.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the unfailing cure for all these troubles. It strengthens the proper muscles and displacement with all its horrors will no more crush you.

Backache, dizziness, fainting, bearing down, disordered stomach, moodiness, dislike of friends and society—all symptoms of the one cause—will be quickly dispelled, and you will again be free. Accept the truth.

You can tell the story of your pain to a woman, and get the help that only a woman can give. Her address is, Lydia E. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.

His Credentials.

It is said that a well known bishop of the Episcopal church in a western town was introduced to a man who said that he was a 'Piscopal. The bishop was evidently not much impressed with the man's manners and said to him:

"How shall I know whether you are an Episcopalian or not?"

"Why," said the other, "cause I do the things that I ought not to have done and leave undone the things that I ought to have done and there is no health in me."

"You'll do," said the bishop.

Catarrh in the Head

Is undoubtedly a disease of the blood, and as such only a reliable blood purifier can effect a perfect and permanent cure. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the best blood purifier, and it has cured many very severe cases of catarrh. Catarrh oftentimes leads to consumption. Take Hood's Sarsaparilla before it is too late.

Hood's Pills do not purge, pain or gripe, but act promptly, easily and efficiently. 25c.

Woman's Dep't.

Wyoming Women Vote for President.

The following letter comes from Lakewood, N. J.:

Will you kindly let me know by return mail whether or not it is true that "women do not vote for presidential electors in Wyoming"? I am stopping in this place for a short time, and am unable, being separated from my books and papers, to get at the facts in the case, and the authority for the same. In talking on woman suffrage with some men in the house, they denied that women had ever voted for presidential electors in Wyoming; and I affirmed that, as women had full suffrage in Wyoming, they must have done so. Will you kindly give the facts and authorities regarding this matter? An ounce of the fact is worth a pound of mere assertion, and for the sake of what is involved in the question, I should like to have an authoritative statement from those who know.

There seems to be a wonderful awakening in Brooklyn and New York city on the subject of woman voting, and we Brooklynites, as we go forth, like to shed our radiance on those sitting in darkness, and draw them out into the light of the awakening dawn.

Sincerely yours,
MARTHA HOLLIDAY CRAGHORN.

Women in Wyoming voted for president in the last presidential election. Three women were elected alternate delegates to the nominating Republican National Convention at Minneapolis, and had seats in that body. Neither men nor women could vote for president in Wyoming so long as it was a Territory. But, ever since 1869, women have had all political rights absolutely equal with the men.

The women of Colorado also now have equal suffrage in all elections, local, State and national. They will vote for congressmen in 1894, and for president in 1896.

Your Lakewood friends are not posted in the history of their own State, which has the honor of having, first in the world, established woman suffrage, on July 2, 1776, by its first constitutional convention. New Jersey women worth £50 voted in the presidential election of 1804, and previously at every election since 1776 they had helped elect the Legislature which chose the presidential electors. Indeed, the Democrats, by statute, disfranchised the women in 1807, because they were said to have voted very generally the Federalist ticket, as, being property-holders, they would naturally have done.

Tell your friends further that every State Legislature, that of New Jersey included, is expressly empowered by the U. S. Constitution to give women a right to vote for presidential electors. See Article 2, Sec. 1, Par. 2, as follows: "Each State shall appoint, in such manner as the Legislature may direct," certain electors, etc. The U. S. Constitution is "the supreme law of the land, anything to the contrary in State constitutions notwithstanding."—[Henry B. Blackwell.

When the Women's Christian Temperance Union was first organized it was thought by some to be of short duration. The immense labor and personal sacrifices in many directions which could alone insure success would weary and discourage them, some said. But now, from small beginnings, it has spread almost over the civilized world, and has active, tried and able workers almost everywhere that the sun shines. It has become a great force in the warfare against the liquor traffic, and, I think, has no equal in the system, its methods and persistence and success.—[E. P.

Paris Ahead of Harvard.

Professor A. G. Webster, of Clark University, says in the Nation with regard to the late Mme. Kovalevski, the eminent mathematician:

It seems rather remarkable that this gifted woman, for whom a professorship was created in the University of Stockholm, should have been refused election to the Swedish Royal Academy of Sciences because she was a woman. There lies before the writer a copy of the motion of Professor Mittag-Leffler, that the word "man" in the constitution of the Academy should be replaced by the word "personer," together with his forcible advocacy of the claims of Mme. Kovalevski to election. Although conservatism won, it has since been recognized that in the premature death of Mme. Kovalevski, not only did the world lose one of its most remarkable women, but mathematical science one of its leading exponents, without regard to sex.

Let us be thankful that in Paris at least brains are recognized as brains, whether male or female. How long shall we wait before such is the case in this progressive country? While in Paris a Russian or American, man or woman, may become a doctor if he or she show the necessary attainments, here a petition must be handed around that Harvard shall allow women who have done the work to receive a real Harvard A. B. Harvard is not the only American university that lets women in at the back door. What answer is made to them if perchance they seek a doctor's degree?

Mrs. Emma Gottheil, wife of Prof. Richard J. H. Gottheil, of Columbia College, has been honored by the French Government, which has conferred upon her the title of Officer de l'Academie Francaise, in recognition of distinguished services rendered to the French language and literature. She is the only woman living in America who is entitled to wear the crossed palms of the Academy and the purple ribbon of an officer. She was born in Beyrout, Syria, and educated in Paris, where she studied until she was sixteen, at which age she graduated. From Paris she was sent by the Alliance Israelite Universelle to Beyrout to undertake educational work, and there she founded a school. This was in 1878. For four years she continued in this educational work with gratifying success, and at the end of that time was called to Aleppo in Mesopotamia, where the same class of work claimed her attention. In that place she established a school for girls under the auspices of the same society. The school had 350 scholars. From Aleppo, Mrs. Gottheil went to Alexandria, Egypt, and spent some months, her object being to further the views of the Alliance Francaise, a society formed for the purpose of making the French tongue a language that would be understood by all peoples on the globe. So far back as 1883 she spoke five languages with fluency. Since that time she had learned English.

A PLEASANT SURPRISE

is in store for you when you buy Doctor Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. If you ever took the ordinary liver pill, big and bulky, nasty too, you'd appreciate a good thing, especially when it is sugar-coated, tiny as a mustard seed but very effective. Other things being equal, the smallest is the best in liver pills—hence, "Pleasant Pellets."

If you are troubled with Indigestion, Constipation, Biliousness, Bilious Headaches, and a hundred and one ills which depend upon an inactive liver,—use Dr. Pierce's Pellets. With these pills you get not only temporary relief but a positive cure; they're guaranteed to give satisfaction in every case, or your money is returned.

For fat people who suffer from indigestion, for hearty eaters and high livers—those whose livers are sluggish, this pill is what is most needed.

Take a Pellet after dinner.

Christian Endeavor Work in Life Saving Stations.

Much interest has centered in the Christian Endeavor Work Life Saving Stations, and at the International Convention in Montreal, Canada, an advanced movement was made by adding the Light Houses and Light Ships to the work; also including the United Kingdom of Great Britain in the field of operation. Men were chosen to represent England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales on the International Committee, which consists of representatives from every State and Province where life saving stations, light houses and light ships are located. Rev. S. Edward Young, of Asbury Park, N. J., is chairman; Rev. J. Lester Wells, 183 Grand Street, Jersey City N. J., is secretary. They delivered addresses at the Montreal convention, the former speaking of the spiritual wants and the latter of the intellectual and physical needs of the crews. The life savers of the world are the bravest men, and continually hazard their lives for others. They guard twenty thousands miles or more of dangerous coasts and have rescued more than a million people from shipwreck. As the most of them are isolated from home and friends it is highly fitting that worldwide sympathy should be extended to them; also to men connected with the light houses and light ships upon whom vessels freighted with precious lives depend for safety. Christian Endeavor Societies, located near stations or light houses, are recommended to conduct appropriate services for the crew and also furnish comfort bags, boots, magazines, papers, mits, mufflers, wristlets, socks, yarn caps and the like for the comfort of the surfmen. Those who desire further information with reference to this noble movement may address the secretary.

Decorative Wives.

Men marry from different motives. Most of them, doubtless, from affection, from affinity, from desire to increase their comfort or content. Others again are impelled to matrimony rather by external than by internal considerations. Among these are men of copious means, to whom home signifies a handsome complete establishment, and a wife, a superb, harmonious figure to preside over it. They set out, therefore, on their quest in calm mood, with definite aim, little liable to be turned aside from their one purpose. As they are clear-headed, energetic, practical, not easily discouraged or frustrated, they invariably succeed.

The woman they have secured has instinct and perception enough to know for what she is wanted, however much the chief want may have been concealed. The implied contract between her husband and herself is that he will furnish all that is needed to make his home luxurious, elegant, materially attractive, and she is to be its social high-priestess. And the contract is usually well carried out. For with a large income this is not difficult.

The pair are for the most part admirably and mutually adapted. He is socially ambitious; so is she. They supplement one another excellently. What he wishes she can fully and most becomingly execute. She entirely understands what he can only suggest. Her sixth and seventh senses, which women alone possess, her tact, her management, her subtle insight, are invaluable. They yield a usurious though intangible interest on every dollar of his many investments. They enrich him where he is most eager to be rich, far beyond the accumulation of his millions, and he is so grateful that at times he almost loves her.

Money is Tight.

And when was it ever otherwise? The oldest man cannot remember. People are grumblers—all grumble—ministers and laymen complain. Well, then, "times are dull, and money is tight," but haven't you got enough to buy a bottle of SOZODONT to keep your teeth clean, and mouth sweet, and help you enjoy life?

Money may be tight, but it is nothing to SPALDING'S GLUE. That's the tightest thing out.

Everybody has eight eyes for his neighbor's business.

Facts Worth Knowing.

In all diseases of the nasal mucous membrane the remedy used must be non-irritating. Nothing satisfactory can be accomplished with douches, snuffs, powders or astringents, because they are irritating, do not thoroughly reach the affected surfaces and should be abandoned as worse than failures. A multitude of persons who had for years borne all the worry and pain that catarrh can inflict testify to radical and permanent cures wrought by Ely's Cream Balm. Your druggist has it.

Where there are no birds the bat will be king.

Something that will quiet the nerves, give strength to the body, induce refreshing sleep, improve the quality of the blood, and purify and brighten the complexion, is what many persons would be very glad to obtain. Carter's Iron Pills are made for exactly this class of troubles, and are remarkably successful in accomplishing the ends desired, as named above. They are useful for both men and women. Price, 50 cents a box.

A Roach in His Head.

A man with a nest of cockroaches in his head presented himself at the Emergency hospital in Washington recently.

Stories have often been told of snakes and frogs in human stomachs. An instance in regard to the habits of animals which is even more peculiar came to light a few weeks ago. Cases have often been noticed where bugs have entered the ear and caused excruciating pain by eating the delicate membranes and tissues of the inner ear before they could be driven out. But this is the first case where a roach was permitted to remain in the ear long enough to lay its eggs and hatch its young.

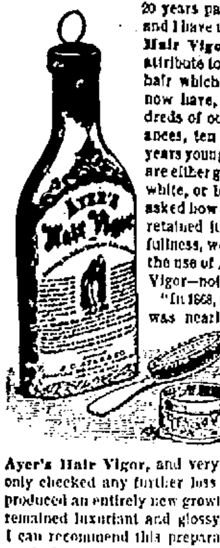
George Woods, who was the patient, a young man of about twenty, is employed on an oyster boat. Like many other boats, this one was infested with big black cockroaches. One night while Woods was asleep a roach crept into his ear and lodged itself just far enough inside to be out of reach. Woods felt it there next morning, but being unable to poke it out with his finger he permitted it to remain, thinking her roachship would tire of her quarters and move out. But the roach, either because it got in head first and could not turn around and get out, or because it found the accommodations exceedingly comfortable, instead of getting out proceeded to make its nest right there in the man's ear. Finally it started to tunnel through the head. As it afterwards was shown on investigation, the roach had eaten its way through the channel to the tympanum and through the drum itself. Here, it seems, it gave up investigations and from some cause or other died. When Wood found that he was deaf in the right ear, he thought he had better have the matter looked into, so he took advantage of his boat being in Washington to visit the hospital. When Dr. Johnson washed out the ear, in addition to the body of the defunct roach a number of little roaches and some eggs which had failed to hatch were removed.—[Omaha Bee.

Milking Reindeer.

The process of milking a herd of reindeer is singular, and we have often watched it with interest, especially when, after a long tramp across the fields, we looked forward to a share of it ourselves. Attended by the sharp-nosed Lapland dogs, the herd appears, its members closely packed together and forming a compact mass in which the horns are a prominent feature. As they approach nearer, one hears a grunting exactly like swine, and a curious, crackling sound, produced by the contact of innumerable horns and limbs. They are then driven into an inclosure, each animal is lassoed in its turn over the horns, and dragged up to an erection in the middle where it is milked. The quantity afforded by each is only about as much as would fill a claret glass, but the milk is extremely rich and nourishing.—[Blackwood's Magazine.

In trying to strengthen her horns the cow was killed.

A Gentleman,



Who formerly resided in Connecticut, but who now resides in Honolulu, writes: "For 20 years past, my wife and I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor, and we attribute to it the dark hair which she and I now have, while hundreds of our acquaintances, ten or a dozen years younger than we, are either gray-headed, white, or bald. When asked how our hair has retained its color and fullness, we reply, 'By the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor—nothing else.'"

"In 1868, my affianced was nearly bald, and the hair kept falling out every day. I induced her to use Ayer's Hair Vigor, and very soon, it not only checked any further loss of hair, but produced an entirely new growth, which has remained luxuriant and glossy to this day. I can recommend this preparation to all in need of a genuine hair-restorer. It is all that it is claimed to be."—Antonio Alarrun, Bastrop, Tex.

"Oh," said the customer, who didn't seem to be able to make up his mind, "the dog isn't for me; it's for my wife."

"Humph! Why didn't you say so?" said the dog-store man. "Here's what you want." Then he brought forward a shapeless yellow pug with a face like a Chinese idol, a smashed-in nose and bow legs.—[Chicago Record.

Absolutely Harmless

—Pearline. That is, to everything except dirt. Anything that can be washed at all can't be hurt by it. But that's only one of its merits. If that were all, Pearline would be better than soap. Add to its doing no harm, that it saves it, by doing away with the rub, rub, rub that wears things out; that it saves labor, time and money, and yet costs no more than common soap—then you wonder, not that millions of women do use Pearline, but that there are any who don't.

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled; if your grocer sends you an imitation, be honest—send it back. 425 JAMES PYLE, N.Y.

STATE NEWS

The first District Convention ever held by the Rhode Island State Sunday School Association was held at the Peace Dale Congregational Church on Wednesday. Among the speakers was N. S. Greet, the "chalk talk" man, of Somerville, Mass., whose chalk talks in this city are so popular and instructive. A collation was served between the afternoon and evening services. Twenty schools, representing a membership of over 1600, were represented at the convention.

Israel Precourst, employed as engineer at the I. B. Mason slaughter house in Providence, while oiling shafting on Tuesday, was drawn over the shafting, his clothing becoming tangled in a wheel, and was wedged between the shaft and the ceiling. Before he could be liberated it was necessary to cut away most of his apparel. He was sent to the hospital where it was found that his back was probably broken. He is 60 years old.

The will of William F. Sayles was filed in the probate court at Pawtucket on Monday. Besides the private bequests, the will gives $100,000 for a library building at Pawtucket, $10,000 each to the Rhode Island homœpathic hospital for free beds in the name of his deceased wife and daughter, $200,000 for memorials to his deceased wife and daughter and portraits of himself and deceased son to Brown University for Sayles' memorial hall. The remainder of the property is given in the main to his son Frank A. Sayles, and his daughter, Mrs. Mary F. Washburn. His son is made sole executor, without sureties.

Annual Tax Levy.—The recurrence of the time for another tax levy reminds the tax payers of their liability to tax and offers them opportunity to redress any real grievances under former levies. The Assessors are to meet at the Town Hall on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of next week and make a new valuation of the ratable property of the town. During the past year of business and industrial depression there has been extended shrinkage in the value of many kinds of property and including real as well as personal. In two or three instances where real estate has been exposed to public sale after unstinted notice it has been sold for a large percentage less than its assessed value, showing very decided depreciation. Much of the real property in the south part of the town has been given an excessive valuation, much beyond its actual worth. It is now very manifest that some has been largely overrated and given a value which events have conclusively demonstrated to be false and fictitious. There has been too much readiness on the part of town officials to listen to the silvery tales and golden prophecies of visionary schemers and land speculators, who have promised much and returned little. Their illusions have deceived many but their predictions do not come to pass. Relatively considered much of the real property in the south part has been excessively valued when compared with that in the north part of the town. Nearly every year reveals large aggregations of personal property as escaping its just part of the public burdens, through the subtle management and adroit prevarication of its possessor. As yet no remedy has been devised to prevent this concealment of property and avoidance of tax. To brand it as a mark of unpatriotic citizenship and low cunning contributes little by way of correction. All honorable and high minded citizens interested in securing a fair and equitable distribution of the public burdens are invited to cooperate with the Assessors next week, in their delicate and difficult task of apportioning the tax for 1894.

BLOCK ISLAND.

The good citizens of this island were called to assemble at a town meeting last Saturday, and they assembled. It was not a regular town meeting but the importance of the question to be settled was sufficient to make it fully as interesting and exciting as if it had been. The saying that "there is more politics on Block Island, to the square inch, than any where else in the state" is an old one, but even "politics" isn't "in it" with the "expenditure of money," and Saturday's special was for the expenditure of $25,000. For the improvement of the roads? Oh, no! It requires a majority vote to appropriate money, and the majority of the citizens of Block Island are apparently satisfied with the town's highways. It was the "Great Salt Pond" again.

The breach, which was made a few years ago, connecting this pond with the ocean, at an expense of $10,000, had proved a useless thing, so the question of making the "breach" a "channel" was agitated. To do this meant an expenditure of $50,000, an amount beyond the town's means. The government was appealed to, but in vain, and then the aid of the State was solicited. Finally the State agreed to give half this amount when the town would give the other half, and on Saturday the town voted, by a majority of 38, to appropriate the $25,000, the amount to be raised by taxation.

Now, while the majority may appropriate money, the minority had it to pay, and hence it is not surprising that there should be considerable bitterness of feeling between the large and small landholders, especially as the principal interests of the former are such as will in all probability be injured rather than helped by the change.

The hope of those advocating the channel is of course that Great Salt Pond, which contains about 1000 acres, shall become the harbor instead of what is now used as such, or at least shall be a popular rendezvous for yachts in summer, a hope that, according to the opposers, is ridiculous in the extreme.

PORTSMOUTH.

The regular session of the Town Council and Court of Probate for May was held Monday afternoon. An instrument in writing, purporting to be the last will and testament of Ann Lynn, deceased, was approved and ordered recorded, and William H. Gifford was appointed administrator with the will annexed, giving bond in the sum of $3000, with Robert W. Anthony and Thomas Manchester, as sureties. Thomas Manchester, Jonathan A. Sisson and Josiah C. Gifford were appointed appraisers. The final account of William D. C. Main, as administrator on the estate of his mother, Phebe Ann Main, deceased, was received and referred to the next regular session in June, with order of notice. An inventory of the estate of Lydia J. Slocum, deceased, was allowed and ordered recorded.

Councilman Henry C. Anthony was appointed a committee to obtain information in regard to the tax of Jacob Mott in the city of Providence. The Town Clerk was ordered to procure 600 copies of the tax list, with an itemized account of the Town Treasurer and list of town officers, for distribution. Cornelius S. Green, Surveyor of Highways for district No. 12, was ordered to build a stone bridge at the foot of Child's lane, and $50 was appropriated. An appropriation of $75 in addition to the highway tax of the district was made, to be used in repairs on the road in the discretion of the surveyor. The Town Clerk presented his bond, which was approved. Bills against the town were allowed and ordered paid, as follows, viz.; of Colby C. Mitchell, surveyor in district, No. 8, for repairs on the highway, $5105; of Josiah C. Gifford, surveyor, in district, No. 13, for repairs on the highway to date, $34.82; of Philip B. Chase, for assessors of taxes, for assessing taxes ordered in town meeting, April 4, 1894, $50; of Wm. E. Coon, for rent of land for town clerk's office, for 2 years, $3; of Chas. Wilcox for two years service as tramp constable, $30; of Wm. T. Harvey, Overseer of the Poor, for assistance to outside poor to date, $12.50; of Wm. F. Brayton, council fees, for special session, April 21, and this session, $7.50.

A ROBBER'S CRIME.

William Barrett Admits Himself to Be a Murderer.

Farmer Farrar's Death Was Almost Instant—Brother of the Victim Succeeded In Capturing the Assassin.

Weston, Mass., May 18.—James Farrar, a respected and prominent citizen of South Lincoln, an adjoining farming town, was shot and killed here by a burglar whom he had found in his bedroom at his home and chased to this place. The murderer was captured by a brother of the murdered man, who, with others, was of the pursuing party.

Shortly before 5 o'clock yesterday morning James Farrar, 28 years old, unmarried, and a leading citizen of South Lincoln, was awakened by the presence of a burglar in his room. He started for the intruder, who left by way of a window. Farrar, who was the constable of the town, roused his two brothers and three other men, and together they chased the fleeing man along the country roads.

Farrar and his brother finally succeeded in catching up with him at the Cherry Brook station of the Massachusetts Central railroad in this place. As they came upon the offender, the latter wheeled about and fired three shots from a revolver at the two brothers. One shot took effect in the breast of James, who expired almost immediately. Edward dealt the murderer a terrific blow on the head, and so stunned him that he was easily bound and turned over to the Weston constable. He was taken to Waltham and locked up.

Admitted His Guilt.

He gave the name of William Barrett, and his age as 51 years. He claimed to be a woodturner by trade and to live on Twenty-fifth street, New York city. When searched he was found to have in his possession a complete outfit of burglars' apparatus and a watch, which the police say was stolen from a house in South Lincoln some time last January. He is supposed to be a professional crook, but it is not yet known what record is against him. He is an Englishman, 5ft. 8in. in height, dark complexion, with dark hair and mustache. At first he denied the shooting, but afterward admitted that he was guilty.

James Farrar, the victim of the affair, was a graduate of Andover academy, a member of the South Lincoln school board, an assessor in the town, and a man of property. He was a prosperous farmer.

It was first reported that Barrett had a companion with him when he was found in Farrar's house. Upon this rumor a tramp named Eastwood was arrested upon suspicion, but he denied all knowledge of the tragedy, and the police say they are satisfied that he is not a party to the crime. No one saw a second thief, and the police are inclined to believe Barrett's story that he was alone in his maraudings.

The murderer was arraigned in the Waltham court and his case put over for a few days.

Robbery the Motive.

Springfield, Mass., May 18.—An attempt was made to wreck the heavy mail train which left Boston last night at 10:15. Between South Framingham and Worcester the train struck an obstruction and was quickly brought to a stop. As the engineer and trainmen ran back to investigate, two shots were fired from the stretch of woods beside the track. It was found that fishplates had been put across the tracks with the evident purpose of wrecking the train. The would-be robbers, after the parting salute from their revolvers, made good their escape into the woods.

Shoemakers Quit Work.

Wolfboro, N. H., May 18.—The 200 employes of Copeland's shoe factory went on strike yesterday. Armenians were imported and took the place of the lasters. As a result all hands went out. The lasters had demanded increased wages.
